PELLETIER SEEKS ALL DOW FACTS

District Attorney Pelletier this afternoon announced that he has started a thorough investigation of the failure of the Stock Exchange house of Stephen R. Dow & Co. Mr. Pelletier says he is convinced that the stock brokerage business should be put under State supervision. He says:

I have commenced an investigation of the Dow failure and propose to push it to the end.

I have no opinion to express at this time and accuse no one, but I intend to find out in behalf of the public how business is done on, by and through the Stock Exchange.

I ask all persons with knowledge in any way affecting the Dow failure or those persons or corporations involved in it, to communicate with me in writing in order that I may arrange for interviews.

Regardless of this case I have long been of the opinion, growing out of my experience as District Attorney, that the stockbrokerage business should be put under State supervision with provision for official examination similar to that in force under our banking laws and providing security to the public and protection for those brokers who are honest and are conducting their transactions along legitimate business and banking lines.

Corporal George Allen, the Norwood veteran of the Civil War, who was arrested for displaying the United States flag with a white cloth attached to it, on which were inscribed the names, "Taft and Sherman," was found guilty today of breaking the law in the Dedham District Court. The judge placed the case on file. In making his decision, the judge said:

"A man who has served under a flag should have a special respect for it."

The veteran said: "I fought under the flag four years, during the darkest days of the Rebellion."

By the Court: "You were not told you should not fly the flag, but that you must remove the addition you had to it."

Before leaving the Governor said he had nothing to add to his statement of last night urging the delegates to the Democratic State convention at Syracuse to make an "unpledged" choice for Governor. However, he will keep in close touch with the situation at Syracuse through Senator O'Gorman.

MOTION OF ETTOR IS DENIED BY COURT

SALEM COURTHOUSE, Sept. 30.—The first juror for the jury of twelve, which is to decide the fate of Joseph J. Ettor, Arturo M. Giovannitti and Joseph Caruso, was picked today, shortly after noon, just an hour after the triple murder trial opened before Judge Joseph F. Quinn in the Essex Superior Criminal Court. The first juror was Christian W. Larsen, a barber, of Haverhill.

The trial began at 11:10 o'clock, immediately after the three prisoners had been seated in the cage near the middle of the courtroom, which was packed with the talesmen, court attendants and officials and newspaper and magazine representatives.

The opening came with a victory for the government in the denial of two motions of the defence by Judge Quinn. The court also denied a request of the attorneys for the defence that more questions than those provided under the statute should be asked the talesmen because of the peculiar nature of the case.

Judge Quinn denied the motion of counsel for Caruso, who is accused of being a principal in the shooting and killing of Mrs. Anna Lo Pezzi, or Mrs. Anna Lopiza during the great Lawrence textile strike last January. Caruso's counsel asked for a bill of particulars. A similar request from attorneys for Ettor and Giovannitti, charged with being accessories before the fact to the murder of the Lawrence woman, was granted by the court last week.

Denies Motion to Quash.

Judge Quinn next denied the motion of counsel for Ettor and Giovannitti to quash the indictment. As soon as this action had been announced by the court, District Attorney Henry C. Attwill, who is prosecuting the case, moved that the trial proceed.

To save time Judge Quinn himself suggested that the customary roll call of the talesmen be omitted. The nature of the suggestion was told to the three prisoners in the cage, and they in turn readily consented.

The saving in time, according to the lawyers in the case, was considerable, as there were 350 talesmen present in the court, ready to be examined.

Judge Quinn addressed the veniremen for twenty minutes on the duty of jury service, which he said was next in importance to the call to arms by the government. He said all citizens should be willing to perform this duty and to sacrifice business and domestic life for a time by so doing.

"The fact that a juror would prefer other means of punishment than death is not in itself sufficient to excuse from jury service provided the man is free from bias," continued the court, facing the veniremen seated or standing about in the large courtroom.

Questions Asked Veniremen.

Judge Quinn stated that counsel for the defence had requested that other questions be asked the jurors because of the peculiar nature of the case. After saying he felt the statutory questions would be sufficient in the present trial, Judge Quinn enumerated these questions, as follows:

First—Are you related to the prisoners, or any of them, or to the deceased?

Second—Have you formed or expressed any opinion?

Third—Are you conscious of any bias or prejudice?

Fourth—Are your opinions such as would preclude you from re-

FOSS TAKES NO HAND IN STRIKE

Governor Foss today refused to take any action in regard to the situation at Lawrence, and he will not call out the militia unless such a move becomes absolutely necessary, according to a statement made this afternoon by the Governor's private secretary, John C. Sherman.

Mr. Sherman stated that the Governor has held several conferences with Chief Whitney of the State police and sees no possible need for calling out the militia at present. The Governor is of the opinion that the Lawrence police and the State inspectors in that city can handle the situation at present. It was stated that the Governor is anxious to prevent any repetition of the outbreaks and bloodshed of the first strike in Lawrence last January.

LIFE CREW GOES TO CRAFT OFF CHATHAM

CHATHAM, Sept. 30.—A two-masted schooner flying signals of distress was discovered this noon by Captain Joseph Kelley of the Monomoy Point life-saving station, off Stonehorse Shoals, about two-and one-half miles from here. The schooner was seen to anchor early today. After she lay to for nearly three hours she was suddenly seen to send up signals of distress. The life-saving crew went out to her.

3 ARRESTED IN LYNN PARADE

Three men were arrested early today following a parade of 500 I. W. W. shoe workers in the streets of Lynn as a protest against the imprisonment and trial of Ettor and Giovannitti.

The arrested men are Thomas Rendo, twenty-five, charged with inciting a riot; Gildo Masarello and Umdato Tastrghone, charged with attempting to rescue Genesly.

The trouble started about 8:30 a. m. when a group of IWW workers gathered and began to parade, with a red flag, calling upon the workers at the different factories to come out and join them. In half an hour the crowd numbered 500. By that time the eighty police of the Lynn force had been called out. They attempted to disperse the crowd and the trouble and arrest followed.

The police will remain on guard, but it is believed the marchers will start and parade to Salem, where the Ettor trial started.

A big mass meeting was held on the Lynn Common at noon and was attended by close to 1,000 shoe workers. A number of speeches were made by the leaders. A large detail of police under Sergeant Murphy was present to keep the crowd within bounds.

BILLINGS GETS REVERE TRUST

Edmund Billings, the banker, reformer and civic leader, and former president of the Paul Revere Trust Company, and who resigned that office in June, today purchased control of the company. The announcement is made by Mr. Billings himself.

While the public learned the news of the change in the control today with surprise, intimate friends of Mr. Billings declared they had known for several months that the former president would again become the head of the company. They said he had been doing his work quietly but effectively ever since his resignation in June.

The consideration financially by which the change was made was not learned today. In a statement Mr. Billings said:

"I have purchased control of the Paul Revere Trust Company today. Most of the men who resigned in June are coming back, which means a complete change in the directorate, with the exception of one or two of the old board.

"Some time between October 15 and November 1 we will move into our new quarters at No. 53 Devonshire street, the building now being remodelled for a modern banking office. The announcement of a new board of directors will be made sometime before we move. The control of the stock of the Paul Revere Trust Company has been taken by a group of well known and substantial men."

FATALLY INJURED IN BATTLE AT LAWRENCE

LAWRENCE, Sept. 30.—As a result of rioting at the Everett mill at 1 o'clock today, when sixty or more strikers clashed with a score of reserve officers, ten more arrests were made by the police authorities, bringing the total number of arrests up to twenty-six. The police drew their clubs and drove the strikers back to Common street, where they dispersed.

The trouble came when the operatives at the Everett mill tried to get past the mill gates after the dinner hour. When the mills opened today, shortly before 7 o'clock, riots occurred in which scores were assaulted and beaten, one man was probably fatally injured and sixteen strikers were placed under arrest.

The clash this afternoon followed a rush made by the strikers and their pickets on the mill operatives in front of the gates. One-third of the number of strikers were women. The police reserves were sent to the scene in automobiles. According to the police, a number of the operatives had been pummelled by the strikers, who used only their fists. The strikers were finally dispersed.

When the first sixteen arrests were made earlier in the day one man was probably fatally injured and scores were assaulted and beaten.

The injured man, Colgan M. De Mara, fell from the running board of a car, causing concussion of the brain.

The fourteen persons arrested early today during a disturbance near one of the mills, appeared in the local court before Judge J. J. Mahoney. All pleaded not guilty. They were represented by Attorney J. J. Donovan. Up to noon four of the cases had been tried. They were found guilty and each fined $5, which they paid. They were:

Veronica Strainjunis, attack on girl named Georgiouna Carron near the Everett Mill; Manuel Silva, I. W. W. leader; Felix Shelwski and Isidor Bletard.

The last three were charged with disturbance. Manuel Garcia, one of those

M'ADAMS AWARDED $14,300 BY JURY IN SUIT AGAINST "L"

Charles W. McAdams, a former member of the Boston police department, was awarded $14,300 by a jury in the sixth session of the Suffolk Superior Court, before Judge Keating today. He recovers this amount from the Boston Elevated for injuries sustained when the patrol wagon in which he was riding on October, 1909, was struck by a street car in Dewey square. He was thrown from the seat and received an injury to his arm.

The case had been tried twice before. The first trial resulted in a disagreement of the jury. The second one brought a verdict of $4,000 for McAdams, but was set aside. This is one of the largest verdicts ever given against the "L."

HIGHER PRICES AT SYMPHONY SEAT AUCTION

Prices ruled generally higher at the auction this morning for seats for the Symphony Hall rehearsal. Seats in rows A and B went at about the same figures as last year. In back of row B they are selling about a third higher. It is believed that the greater interest is the reflection of the return of Dr. Carl Muck, conductor.

Four seats in row C, 21 to 24 inclusive, sold for $35.50 premium, which is about $5 higher than the same seats brought last year. In the same row four other seats, 16 to 19 inclusive, sold at $30 premium.

FIRST JUROR CHOSEN FOR TRIAL OF ETTOR

turning a verdict punishable with death?

When the judge finished his address, Ettor and Giovannitti engaged in a spirited conference with their counsel. This lasted several minutes.

The greatest interest was shown in the trial here. Because of the large number of talesmen to be examined, the public was not admitted to the trial today.

In the corridors and about the courthouse was a large force of police, regulars and special officers, under City Marshal Patrick J. Lellan of this city. In the court premises were seventeen deputy sheriffs and seventeen constables under Sheriff Samuel A. Johnson.

The talesmen were admitted to the courtroom in alphabetical order. Among the names called appeared many prominent citizens of Essex County, including William A. Brown, Jr., a Boston broker; Warren R. Bowen, college professor; John C. Adams, shoe manufacturer; E. Forrest Llewelley, civil engineer, and L. W. Libby, architect.

Ettor Nods to Lawyers.

The three prisoners seemed in good health. They were escorted by deputies to the prisoners' cage, which is an enclosure five feet wide and eight feet long. Caruso sat silent, but Ettor and Giovannitti occasionally chatted together in low tones. Ettor recognized his lawyers with a nod.

The work of jury empanelling marked the first day of the trial.

The streets surrounding the courthouse, which is on Federal street, were deserted up to a half-hour of the opening of the proceedings, but at 9 o'clock a group began to gather.

Spectators could not hope to get into the trial, or even into the building today, because the courtroom, although one of the largest and best equipped in the State, proved too small for the venire of 300 and the newspaper and magazine writers, artists and photographers which represent the reading public of the world. A corridor has been converted into the liveliest kind of a newspaper office, with special telegraph and telephone equipment.

Sheriff Samuel A. Johnson, who has had thirty years or more experience, knew how to handle a crowd effectively and in a manner to please all, save those without credentials, who had to continue to breath the outside air and pick up whatever scraps they could of the doings inside.

Admission by Card.

Admission was by countersigned card, which had to pass a series of inspections before the holder reached the court chamber.

The routine of jury empanelling constituted the major proceedings of the special day. Candidates were admitted to the courtroom in alphabetical order and were in their seats by 9:10. The balance of the twelve were held in an adjoining courtroom.

All talesmen were investigated by both sides, care being taken to prevent exercised by the Government to ascertain their affiliation with labor organizations.

Ettor, Giovannitti and Caruso were brought into the courthouse from the Salem Jail on St. Peter street, an eighth of a mile away, at 9:30. A large crowd on the street when the van arrived.

It had been planned to have Judge Quinn address the talesmen in two contingents, on account of the large number, but his honor decided to make one speech to the trial court.

Prisoners Brought In.

The three prisoners were brought in at 11:40.

Before the prisoners were brought in there was a conference in the judge's lobby, lasting from 9:30 until 11. They were handcuffed, Ettor and Giovannitti being linked together. The prisoner's cage is a metal lattice-work affair, eight feet long and five wide with sloping sides.

Caruso was the first to step into the cage. He is a slender young man, taller than the other prisoners. He wore a dark coat.

Ettor Nods to Friends.

Ettor, his thick hair disheveled, was in the centre. Giovannitti was the last to step in, and the door clicked after him. There was a slight pink flush in Ettor's cheeks. He and Giovannitti chatted a bit. Ettor recognized and nodded to his friends.

Court convened at 11:10 a. m.

Judge Quinn is short, thick-set and square-should-red. He wore a black frock coat and a black four-in-hand tie. He has a pleasant and determined face. He wears glasses.

Court Crier George F. Cole announced the opening of the court. Deputy Sheriff Cole is seventy-four and the father of former Speaker Cole of the House of Representatives.

Judge Quinn first denied the motion of counsel for Caruso for a bill of particulars which privileges was won by counsel for Ettor and Giovannitti last week.

The court also denied the motion of counsel for Ettor and Giovannitti to quash the indictment.

Limit Roll Call.

District Attorney Atwill then moved that the trial proceed. Judge Quinn suggested that the roll call of talesmen be omitted to save time. This the prisoners' attorneys readily consented to.

Judge Quinn then addressed the 350 talesmen. He emphasized the gravity and importance of a murder trial. He said that jury service for such a purpose was next in importance to the call to arms by the government.

He said citizens should be patriotic enough to be willing to perform jury service and to sacrifice business and domestic life for a time in so doing.

He said casual and cursory reading of incomplete and inaccurate reports might have caused candidates for jury service to form an opinion.

Judge Quinn said the fact that a juror would prefer other means of punishment than death was not in itself sufficient excuse from service if the man was free from bias and opinion.

The court enumerated the four questions. He said counsel for the defence had requested that other questions be asked the jurors because of the peculiar nature of the case. But the court said the regular questions described by statute were enough.

These which were put to every candidate called were in substance:

Are you related to the prisoners or any of them and to the degree?

Have you formed and expressed any opinion?

Are you conscious of any bias or prejudice?

Are your opinions such as would preclude you from returning a verdict punishable with death?

Have 22 Challenges.

Judge Quinn talked twenty minutes.

A rather spirited conference between Ettor and Giovannitti and their senior attorney followed at the rear, while a low buzz arose in the thronged courtroom.

Clerk George told the three prisoners they had the right to challenge twenty-two jurors. The first card drawn from the box at 12:10 bore the name of James A. Eaton, janitor, of Andover, aged sixty-three. He had formed an opinion, was opposed to capital punishment and was excused.

The second man called was Charles C. Phillips, farmer, Middleton. He was not in court.

Christian W. Larsen, barber, Haverhill, the third man, was accepted ten minutes from the time the examination of jurors opened.

Steven M. Morse, laborer, Rockport, was challenged by the prosecution.

William H. Ferrick, real estate, Beverly, had expressed an opinion and was challenged by the State.

Mahlon E. Austin, Lawrence, formed opinion; excused.

Henry K. Elliott, bookkeeper, Lynn, formed opinion; excused.

James P. M. B. Hinman, retired, Swampscott, aged 68; excused because of age.

Fred E. Pearson, carpenter, Newbury, opposed to death penalty; excused.

Challenged by State.

Theodore F. Connolly, barber, Lynn; challenged by State.

Charles E. Chase, tea dealer, Lynn; challenged by Caruso.

GRAND JURY PROBE IN DYNAMITE CASE GOES OVER A WEEK

The investigation of the alleged dynamite planting in Lawrence, by the special session of the Grand Jury was postponed by District Attorney Pelletier today. The matter will be taken up next Monday, when the Grand Jury begins the regular October business.

A notice was sent to the members of the Grand Jury from the District Attorney's office, telling them not to report. The jury had suspended the investigation of the dynamite planting on September 21, with the return of a secret indictment against William H. Rice of Milton, charging an illegal transportation of dynamite. He was arrested late that afternoon. His indictment came the following Monday morning and he was held in $2,000 by Judge Raymond in the first session of the Suffolk Superior Criminal Court.

QUINCY QUARRY WORKERS QUIT AS ETTOR PROTEST

One thousand quarry and shed workers, most of them members of the I. W. W., from Quincy, Weymouth and the Braintrees, quit work today and paraded through the streets of South Quincy this evening. The leaders declared the strike would last at least twenty-four hours and was called as a demonstration against the keeping of Ettor and Giovannitti in jail. The strike followed visits of the I. W. W. organizers here yesterday.

Chief of Police Frank E. Burrill of Quincy ordered every special officer in the city to police headquarters for reserve duty in case of trouble. Practically the entire Quincy police force was detailed to watch the parades.

Caleb Howard, the Quincy organizer of the I. W. W., declared he would have 4,000 in line before the day was over. The Fore River Shipbuilding Company had not been affected at noon today.

The permit to parade was given the Quincy marchers by Chief of Police John W. McAnarney.

CARLO TRESCA, THE STRIKE LEADER, NOW DEFYING ARREST

PASTOR MAKES PLEA FOR ETTOR

The red flag of the I. W. W. was advocated by the Rev. Nicholas Vander Pyl, pastor of the Congregational Church of Haverhill, before the ministers of that denomination at their meeting today in Pilgrim Hall. He said that Ettor was arrested to get him out of the way, and that the mill operatives were worse off in this country than in the places whence they came.

"When these people in their parades carry a red flag, it stands for the common red blood that flows through their veins and it is not a revolutionary flag merely," declared Mr. Vander Pyl.

"There is a veritable tinder box existing in Lawrence, and you can't blot it out in the way that you are handling it. When you talk about Ettor you must distinguish him personally from the organization he stands for. He is the victim of a class consciousness, just as the other side is a victim of class consciousness.

Rev. Allen Stockdale asked the speaker why was it that workmen of other nationalities, when they paraded, always carried the American flag with other distinctive symbols.

"There are the Irish," said this minister, "Look at their loyalty to this country, for when they ever carry the Irish flag they carry as American flag."

MAY VOTE STRIKE IF ETTOR IS CONVICTED

NEW HAVEN, Sept. 30.—Ballots are being distributed here in all factories, polling the men for a strike if Ettor and Giovannitti are found guilty. A monster mass meeting was held last night.

STRIKERS CLASH WITH POLICE; 26 ARRESTED

arrested, had his case continued until tomorrow for further investigation.

The central committee of the local I. W. W. issued the following statement this afternoon:

This organization two days ago issued a statement that it could not be held responsible for the individual acts of its members. This morning one of the most brutal and unwarranted attacks ever made upon a body of citizens by a uniformed force, without doubt acting upon instructions from their superiors, was consummated. Men were viciously beaten while on the ground, three or four policemen being parties to the beating of a single man. The situation in Lawrence is one that is strained to the utmost. The foreign population is in wrought up over the continuous attacks and continuous persecution.

Over a hundred detectives arrived last night in Lawrence. We believe these imported thugs led some of the Italian workers on the picket line this morning into attempting to check those from going into the mills who did not care to join the protest.

About twelve thousand operatives are out of work. Of these the mill officials figure that seven thousand are strikers. The rest are either kept away by picketing, or found no work for them at the mills because of the strike of the others.

State Officers Thompson and Wells arrested a man whose name is unknown, and brought him to the station house on a charge of carrying a loaded revolver.

The man had stationed himself in one of the streets leading to the mills. He began asking questions as the cars of work, halting and in some cases. It is charged assaulting them. The officers approached and the man attacked them.

Stands Off Crowd of Forty.

He got the worst of the tussle. They charge he reached for a pocket and they searched him to find a loaded thirty-eight calibre revolver and a six-inch knife, brand new.

State Officer Fred Flynn stood off a crowd of forty men who attacked him near the Everett mill, early today. He backed up against a post and drew his club. One man attempted to creep up behind him, but Flynn turned in time to catch the assailant and took him to the station when help came.

Moyer Scanlon declared today that the strike is at its worst now, and that the police are easily in control. He said:

"From now on, the disorders will die down. The police are amply competent to handle the situation and we feel no uneasiness."

A fireman, William Hofferth, was on his way to one of the mills early today, escorting his daughter to work. Half a dozen men attacked him. For several minutes, guarding his daughter from their blows with his own body, he fought them off till help came.

One man, escorting a woman to work, carried a revolver in his hand. He was given a clear path.

Two men, one with a rat-tail file and the other with a hammer, attacked agent Milliken of the Everett mill. The agent drew a revolver and drove them away.

Thousands of operatives, despite the picketing, returned to the mills, which opened for work as usual.

Tresca—the Joseph Ettor of this Ettor protest strike—was the leader and moving spirit in the strike demonstrations here early today, in spite of his arrest and escape or release during the riot yesterday in which two policemen were stabbed.

Tresca moved about freely. He met policemen aplenty. None made a move to arrest him.

Police Busy.

Tresca was taken in custody yesterday during the trouble. He was not formally arrested. No patrolman said to him—"I arrest you in the name of the law," and so, the Lawrence police say, they can charge him with nothing more serious than a misdemeanor. No warrant can be sworn out for a misdemeanor. One must be arrested in the act.

So the police do not arrest Tresca.

The police were busy otherwise, when the mills opened today, however. There are forty State police in Lawrence, and an increased police force. The city authorities expect to be able to handle any trouble likely to arise.

Pickets came out early. At daylight there were sharp people on the street. The mills opened at 6:45 a. m., and it was hoped to keep out every employe.

There is a chance that the strike may spread to other cities. Haverhill workers paraded here yesterday and caught the spirit. Others came from Lowell, some from Lynn, and it is possible that a strike will be called in each of these cities during the day.

"Hundreds of hats were in one of these little shops. Hats I thought of be at least $7.50 were only $4.75, some were less.

"On one side were the goods for men. Silk socks at 25c were one of the bargains. 'Seconds,' thought I. But, no, to my surprise, all were perfect.

"On another table boys' corduroy pants at 50c. Only recently I saw similar pants at $1.25 in another store. The automatic plan flashed upon me. Third reduction, probably. But, looking at the tag, I saw they had just gone on sale. The incident recalled what I had read about low first prices.

"Strolling along, I came to the lunch counter. A good thing to remember. It will save many steps.

"After passing the Jewelry and Leather Goods, I saw that as yet I had only been on the balcony.

"Descending, I saw a section for dresses. Imagine my surprise at seeing not only dresses for house wear, but some that would look well at evening functions.

"A little further tables of girls' dresses caught my eye. And the prices! What a chance for those with large families.

"A visit to the coat and suit section completed the trip, although many departments were yet unfouched. One coat particularly impressed me, a heavy stylish mixture at $17.50. I am sure it could not be duplicated at $30.

"What an unusual store and what bargains. Must come here often,' was my thought as I left."

WIFE FEELS SURE OF HEINZE'S LOVE

NEW YORK, Sept. 30.—"I love my husband and I know that he loves our little boy. I am convinced that he loves me. These rumors of estrangement and possible divorce cannot disturb me. I can keep my husband. If a man is inclined to wander a little from the paths of strict convention that should not be a cause of worry to his wife. It only makes him more glad to get home. I am very sure that Mr. Heinze is not going to Reno to seek a divorce."

In these words, spoken not with indifference, but with trustful confidence in her own position, Mrs. F. Augustus Heinze, wife of the former "copper king," voiced the interesting breadth of view which at least one wife regards the marital relationship under modern conditions.

Mrs. Heinze formerly was Mrs. Bernice Golden Henderson. She divorced her former husband and achieved distinction on the stage in emotional roles before she met Mr. Heinze.

There had come a report from Fort Worth, Texas, that Mrs. Lillian Hobart French had appeared there coincidentally with Mr. Heinze's arrival on a business trip. Mrs. French, psychologist and disciple of Delia Ellen De Bar in the Mahatma Temple on Thirty-third street, is the woman who said after Mr. Heinze's marriage in 1910: "Fritz Heinze will return to me. He has done it before and he will do it again."

Mrs. Heinze received a reporter in her apartments at the Dorilton.

"Candidly," she said, "these recurrent reports do not in the least affect me. I am used to them, for one thing, and, besides, my husband and I love one another and there is nothing to be worried about.

"If I had faith and philosophy enough to marry Mr. Heinze, I surely have enough to last to the end of the chapter. Certainly a business trip of my husband to the South is not going to disturb me very much."

She paused, and with sudden gravity continued:

"I have learned more of the meaning of life, too, since my visit last Winter to Egypt—to the heart of the desert where I went after our little boy was born. In those vast silences I seemed to have 'found myself.' Little things that once disturbed me can no longer make any difference. Only the essentials count. My children are the chief essentials. Mr. Heinze loves them and me. The little boy is the image of his father."

First Mrs. Story Denies Divorce

Bessie Abott in Boston

MISS BESSIE ABOTT, STORY'S NEW BRIDE.

T. Waldo Story, husband of Bessie Abott, the singer, learned today at the Copley-Plaza, where the couple are staying, that the former Mrs. Story has denied all knowledge of a divorce.

He said when he heard the news:

"There is nothing to be said."

In New York the attorney for Mrs. I. C. Broadwood, mother of the first Mrs. Story, gave out two cablegrams. One was a copy of that sent by Mrs. Broadwood to her daughter, addressed in the care of the Countess Emanilia Piatti, Cadnabia, Italy. It read:

Waldo states he has obtained divorce from you and married Abott. Cable affirmation or denial of divorce and particulars if any papers served on you.

The other was this reply from Mrs. Maud Story:

Know absolutely nothing. Received no papers or communication whatever. Miss Abott is in Boston to appear in "Robin Hood." She and Mr. Story returned from Europe recently and announced they had been married abroad. Mr. Story, who is a sculptor, is a brother of Julian Story, the painter, and former husband of Mme. Emma Eames.

HARVARD WINS! RATS LOSE BY HEAVY SCORE

Fishing for rats took its place today alongside of the gridiron, the diamond and the other more classic out of door activities at Harvard as a real sport. The students, especially in the rat-infested halls, declared it was a topnotch sport, too, and they declared the influx of rodents which have made life miserable lately wasn't without its blessings in adding chances for fun not provided in the regular school and athletic curriculum.

The rat anglers early today succeeded in landing several big catches, and tonight the tank Waltons of basement fishing expect to lie in wait with dozens of lines baited with cheese and other morsels beloved by the rodents. Already, the college has annexed two ferrets, a fox terrier, and one Professor Johnson of Somerville, as additions to Harvard's staff of rat-eradicators.

The rat-fishers say the best "bites" are to be had in Hollis Hall. They have decided to use four-ounce rods, with trout line and reels. Under the rules adopted for the rat-game, no student is allowed more than three hooks on a line. To have more was declared unsportsmanlike.

Some of the students declared that they didn't think the rats would fall for the cheese-baiting, and it was their belief that the faculty would have to hire a Pied Piper of Hamelin before the rodents could be fully exterminated. One of the anti hook-and-line men said that traps were just as good, as he had caught seven in a trap last night which he had baited with nothing more than an old patent leather shoe. The rat-anglers declared that one student with a trout line could catch as many as seventeen rats in a night by diligent work.

Professor Johnson entered on his duties Friday night. He made a big bag. Saturday night he did better still, and when his day's work ended early today he stood the victor in the fray, a huge pile of rodents at his feet, while the terrier and the ferrets struck commanding attitudes upon the bodies of their victims.

The plan of campaign is simple. The ferrets are sent into the rat holes. The terrier "waits without."

The rats are deathly afraid of the ferrets. They are swifter than the deadly little animals, also. They flee madly as the ferret sniffs along their devious burrows. Some of them double about and escape. But many dash blindly out of the holes into the cellar. The terrier and Professor Johnson do the rest.

Some of the younger freshmen slept well last night for the first time since college opened.

"AUNT DELIA" IS 88 YEARS TODAY

MILLBURY, Sept. 30.—Miss Delia C. Torrey, famed the country over as President Taft's "Aunt Delia," kept her birthday today. She is eighty-eight years old. Friends called at the old Torrey mansion on Elm street, and Miss Torrey received many remembrances, not forgetting one from "Will." Only a little while ago Aunt Delia entertained the President on his birthday.

Miss Torrey retains her health and her interest in what is going on in the world. She is especially concerned just now with her nephew's campaign for re-election and is just as sure of his success as she was four years ago.

Deny Petition for Complete Report on Pastor Ayers' Case

A petition signed by the minority members of the Park and Downs Union Congregational Church of Wollaston, in which they ask for a full report of the findings in the trial of their pastor, Rev. W. B. Ayers, has been turned down by the Suffolk South Association of Congregational Ministers, it was stated today. Rev. Mr. Ayers has been named as the defendant in a suit for $25,000 damages brought by Chester A. Boynton of Revere, who alleges the alienation of the affections of his wife, Mrs. Helen Willett Boynton of Wollaston.

The petition of the minority in the church, who are opposed to Rev. Mr. Ayers, follows:

Suffolk South Association of Ministers:

We, the undersigned members of the Park and Downs Union Congregational Church, protest against the letter of explanation given to the defendant and complainants relative to the finding of your association concerning the conduct and character of W. B. Ayres. This letter is regarded by Mr. Ayers's congregation and the community as an exoneration, thereby placing us in a false light. We also request that you send us the true and complete findings of your committee at the recent investigation.

The ministers' association replied that "it did not seem it wise to give any further publicity to the matter at present" and that it had left the entire matter in the hands of a committee composed of Dr. Clarence A. Vincent of Roxbury and Rev. George W. Owen of Hyde Park.

MILK PRODUCERS ACCEPT 38-CENT RATE

The milk producers have yielded their demand for 40 cents per can of 8½ quarts of milk, and as a result, there will be no milk strike for at least six months.

The contractors refused to pay the 40-cent rate, but offered 38. This the producers have accepted, declaring they do it to prevent 10-cent milk.

ADMITS HE BEAT WIFE TO DEATH

PROVIDENCE, Sept. 30.—Patrick F. Hanley, twenty-nine, a mill worker, awoke today and found his wife terribly beaten and bruised and lying prostrate on the kitchen floor of their home in the tenement district of Olneyville. He shook her. She did not move, Hanley cried. The neighbors came in, and found the woman had been beaten to death.

In the next room to that in which the murdered woman lay, the neighbors found four children, sleeping peacefully. The eldest was seven, and the youngest, lying in its crib, was seventeen months old.

The neighbors lifted the children tenderly and removed them to nearby houses. Then the police came, and to them, as they declared, Hanley confessed that he had killed his wife with his bare fists.

Children Undisturbed.

The police said Hanley told them he had come home intoxicated last night. He quarreled with his wife. Then he hit her, the police say. In his drunken fury he attacked her and battered her terribly with his fists, the police said the husband told them. Then after the wife had fallen to the kitchen floor, Hanley staggered to his bed in the next room. It was in this room that his four children were sleeping. They had not been awakened by all the noise of the fight that Hanley told the police had with his wife.

Early today Hanley told the authorities who came to arrest him that he remembered the fight.

"I killed her with my fists," the police said he confessed to them.

Enters Plea of Guilty.

Hanley was arraigned before Judge Gorham.

"Are you guilty or not guilty?" asked the court, after the charge was read.

"Guilty," said Hanley.

He was held without bail.

The Hanleys lived at No. 128 Julian street, in Olneyville, near the mills, with their four children—Christine, seven; Thomas, five; Mary, three and one-half, and Leon, seventeen months. They were married eight years ago, when both were twenty-one.

The children were taken by the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Children. Then a brother of Hanley took the children to his home.

SAY SCHOOLGIRL AND CLERK FLED

Friends of Miss Lilla Finnegan, daughter of Patrick Finnegan, a wealthy Dorchester liquor dealer, are sure she has eloped with Parker Hurlburt, a grocer's clerk. Miss Finnegan is eighteen. Hulburt is twenty-six.

They were seen together on the Yarmouth boat Friday afternoon. There has been no news of them since. A brother of Hurlburt is said to have called up the Finnegan home at No. 158 Adams street, Dorchester, by telephone the night the girl disappeared. He gave the message that the young woman had gone to Yarmouth, Nova Scotia, with the clerk.

The girl was a pupil at Notre Dame Academy in Roxbury. On Monday at 8:30 she was seen talking with young Hurlburt in front of the Fields Corner postoffice. At 11 o'clock it is said, she was excused from her studies and at 12 the two were supposed to have had lunch together. At 2 o'clock the two were together on the Yarmouth boat.

That ten thousand dollars.

Do you want it?

The five district prizes, of one thousand dollars each.

Care for one of them?

The Sunday AMERICAN'S voting contest is fairly under way, at last, but there is still plenty of time to enter. The biggest prize of all, indeed, may be won by somebody who has yet to fill out the enrollment ballot.

Those who fill out the Enrollment Ballot today and send it directly to the Contest Editor, P. O. Box 3047, Boston, Mass., will be credited with 600 votes in the Contest without further effort.

Last week the value of the Enrollment Ballot was 300 votes; the week before last, the Ballot was good for 1,000 votes. Next week it will represent LESS THAN 600 VOTES.

Everything indicates that you had better ...y no longer.

How to Get Votes.

...en thousand dollars in cash will be ...arded to the New Englander who receives the largest number of votes in the ...ntest.

...ese votes may be accumulated in two ...s.

...irst, by means of coupons. Coupons ...nd in the daily AMERICAN are ... votes each. Coupons from the ...MERICAN are valued at 25 votes ...ach.

A second way to get votes is by ...ng subscriptions to the Sunday ...ERICAN in any one, or all, of three ...periods, for six months, for twelve ...nths, and for thirty-six months.

A six months' subscription is worth 2,500 votes; a thirty-six months' subscription, 7,500 votes.

Coupons have their value, subscriptions have their value; the wise contestant will plan to get both coupon votes and subscription votes. When one of your friends subscribes for the Sunday AMERICAN ...indly him to save the coupons. Don't overlook anything.

The Contest Manager, whose office is in Winthrop square, around the corner of Summer and Devonshire streets from the AMERICAN building, will be glad to meet contestants and prospective contestants to "talk it over with them," to give them the benefit of his experience in several similar campaigns. When your Enrollment Ballot is received, in fact, he will furnish you with all the supplies you need for a vigorous campaign. Get in touch with him today by means of the Enrollment Ballot.

Your Opportunity.

You may be surprised when this contest is over and you read the names of the winner of $10,000 and the five winners of $1,000 each—by the small total ...ds of the leaders.

Then what will you say to yourself?

Whatever you say, your opportunity will have come and gone.

Now—today—this minute—is the time to act!

The Contest Manager says that some subscription blanks that come to him have not been properly filled out. They give the name of the subscriber and that of the street he lives on, but they fail to designate the town or city.

Please be careful about this. A delay of one week in getting your subscriber on the books of the Sunday AMERICAN will cost you at least the twenty-five votes of the coupon in his paper. You can see what this may mean when you know that at the end of the contest you MIGHT be only twenty-five votes behind the winner of the $10,000.

It will help every contestant to read every day not only what appears in the news columns concerning the progress of the $40,000 contest, but the Contest matter in the advertising pages as well.

NOTICE TO PARTICIPANTS—Take notice that the Special Offer expires at 10 o'clock next Saturday night. Four EACH lot of TEN subscriptions received by the Contest Editor before that hour (whether they be for six months, twelve months or thirty-six months) an EXTRA credit of 5,000 votes will be given.

DOCTOR FINDS ELIXIR OF YOUTH

PHILADELPHIA, Sept. 30.—"The Fountain of Youth," sought through the centuries from Homer to De Soto, has been discovered by Dr. Frank R. Starkey. At least, Dr. Starkey asserts that by a series of experiments upon himself, his mother and his friends, an "elixir of youth" that makes old folks appear younger, and, he claims, will prolong life.

Working along entirely different lines from Metchnikoff, the French scientist, the Philadelphia doctor has produced the results the other has aimed for, and has living witnesses to attest the results.

Dr. Starkey has taken extracts from the pituitary gland in the base of the skull which influences the growth of the body, and which when administered to children of stunted growth is said to make them grow larger. He has extracts from the thyroid gland which influences the flesh and tissue development of the body.

The combination of these various extracts, Dr. Starkey has found, increases the cell reproduction, purifies the blood, gives added vitality to the nervous system and conduces to longevity. His first experiments were made a number of years ago upon his mother, who, although seventy years old, is as active and appears like a woman of fifty.

Dr. Starkey has found the extract of benefit in typhoid fever, pneumonia and locomotor ataxia.

Auto News

By J. C. KERRISON.

Thirty million dollars' worth of American automobiles found markets abroad in the fiscal year 1912, against less than $1,000,000 worth ten years ago. Exports of automobiles to foreign countries in 1912 were valued at $21,500,000, and of parts thereof, including tires, $3,000,000. If to this are added shipments to Hawaii and Porto Rico, we get for the year's sales of American automobiles outside of continental United States a round $30,000,000. The total number of machines exported to foreign countries was 21,757, valued at $21,500,139, averaging slightly less than $1,000 each, while the value of those to the non-contiguous American territory was higher, averaging $1,600 each.

Export price of American automobiles in 1912 averaged less than in any previous year in the history of the export trade. Average for 1912 was $990, against $1,100 in 1911, $1,336 in 1910, $1,700 in 1909, and $1,800 in 1908. Automobiles imported last year amounted about to $2,000,000 in value, against more than $4,000,000 in 1907. Average import value of automobiles brought into this country last year was $2,216 against $2,138 in 1911, $1,936 in 1910, $1,788 in 1909, and $2,292 in 1908.

* * *

Into the cost of keeping an automobile nearly every person figures depreciation and interest on the investment as a very big item. Exception of this practice is taken by a motoring writer in the Westminster Gazette of London, who says that he believes the action of the business man in allowing for interest on capital and depreciation when he uses the car purely for pleasure is illogical.

"He does not count interest on the capital expenses of a continental holiday, a trip around the world, or a sojourn in Egypt," writes the Gazette man, "nor on the moneys he spends on amusements and hobbies. He is content to part with his cash for the pleasures they give him.

"It is this sort of thing which makes the cost of motoring such an ugly item in the eyes of prospective buyers. If, therefore, you have no other use for a motor car than to make it serve your convenience and pleasure, the interest on capital should reasonably be omitted from the cost of maintenance, but care should be exercised in every case to buy such a vehicle as will not too rapidly depreciate in value and which will, after considerable use command a fair price in the second-hand market."

* * *

Americans who have motored abroad have noted one decided difference as regards tires here and in Europe. This particular point is that there is no written guarantee of mileage given by European makers, and further the indicated probable service of the tire is nowhere near what is expected and attained in this country. So approach to 5,000 miles as a guarantee, such as the Ajax gives to tire users in this country, is made by foreign concerns.

European car users who are astounded over service of a few thousand miles from casings, would be inclined to regard as "American bluff" certified reports such as come in constantly to the Ajax-Grieb Rubber company, of tires made by them which have attained mileages anywhere from 6,000 up to 11,000 miles, and in not a few instances in excess of that.

SON OF SICKLES, LABORER CLAIMS

HOBOKEN, N. J., Sept. 20.—New interest was added today to the life story of General Daniel E. Sickles, whose son recently made public the name of a New York society woman as having for years replaced the second Mrs. Sickles in his affections, when Alfred Summers Molyneux, a railroad employe at Hoboken, declared his belief he is the son of General Sickles by his first wife. So convinced is Molyneux that he has advertised for the first wife of General Sickles, from whom the General was divorced before the Civil War. Her maiden name was Teresa Bagooli, daughter of a famous Italian musician.

While the aged general maintains his determination not to relent toward the second Mrs. Sickles, from whom he has been estranged for twenty-seven years and who recently saved his home from being taken up on a mortgage, he is confronted with this latest story.

Molyneux, who is fifty-four years old, has been searching for his mother for twenty-seven years. Little by little, he says, there has been unfolded to him sufficient to convince him that his mother abandoned him and that General Sickles never knew of his existence.

Found in Carpet Bag.

The man who bears the name of Molyneux grew up in New Jersey with the idea that his mother and father were Betsy and Henry Molyneux. After their deaths he learned that he was only a foster child and in September, 1898, had been found in a carpet bag aboard a Camden and South Amboy train when it reached Jersey City.

He has found that Mrs. Mary King, a nurse, noticed that a handsome young woman on the train had kept her eyes on the bag, but had not taken it. When she called the attention of the conductor to it it was carried aboard the boat. There a noise was heard inside it. The bag was opened and a child in expensive clothes was found.

The young woman was on the boat. The captain mounted a barrel and called for the mother to come forward and take the infant. The young woman finally said she hoped he did not mean her. She was nervous; she seemed to think she had been singled out, and gave him a card with an address in Washington.

Identified as Mrs. Sickles.

Mrs. King was found by Molyneux and she told him that the young woman was Mrs. Daniel Sickles, then the wife of a Congressman. The incident happened about the time of the estrangement of General Sickles and his first wife over the affair in which the beautiful wife became involved with Philip Barton Key and for which Key paid with his life.

The belief of the man who thinks he is the son of General Sickles is that his mother decided not to let the general know he had a son, and so abandoned him.

VERMONT GOVERNOR'S RECEPTION OCT. 3

RUTLAND, Vt., Sept. 20.—The office of the Governor has been removed from this city to Montpelier. Governor John A. Mead leaves Tuesday. The reception by the outgoing to the incoming Governor is expected Thursday night.

FIRST FORD HALL LECTURE OCT. 13

The regular Winter course at Ford Hall lectures will open October 13. This is the sixth season.

Lectures will continue through April 13. The lecturer will be Dr. Thomas C. Hall of Union Theological Seminary, New York, who will talk on "The Morals of Anarchy and Socialism."

Alfred W. McCann of New York, with a lecture on "How Shall the People Get Pure Food," opens the November list. He is a co-worker with Dr. Wiley in the struggle for pure food laws. Professor Henry C. Vedder of Chester, Pa., will discuss "Law and Order" at the meeting on November 10, and the following week Clifford G. Roe of Chicago, executive secretary of the American Vigilance Association, will speak on "The Unsocial Vice." Judge Ben B. Lindsey of Denver is expected to be the speaker on November 24.

Lectures during December will be Baroness von Suttner, John Haynes Holmes of New York, Dr. Stephen S. Wise, Professor Charles Zeublin and Professor Charles Prosper Fagnani. During January lecturers will include two women. On January 5, just before the municipal election, Mrs. Anna Garlin Spencer of New York will talk on "Is the Public School Democratic?" and on January 19 Dr. Yanchi, a Chinese woman physician, will speak about the awakening of China. Other interesting lectures are arranged for the balance of the season.

NEWSBOY GIVES HIS CRIPPLED LEG TO SAVE GIRL'S LIFE

CHICAGO, Sept. 20.—To save the life of a girl he never had seen until laid on the operating table beside her, Willie Rugh, a newsboy, sacrificed his crippled leg. He read of an accident in which Miss Ethel Smith had been seriously burned when the gasoline tank on the motorcycle she was riding exploded. Skin grafting was all that could save her life. The physicians knew so much skin would be needed there was little hope of obtaining enough. Willie went to the office of Dr. J. A. Craig in Gary and offered to give his crippled leg. When told so much skin would be needed it would necessitate amputation, he hesitated a moment and then told Dr. Craig he was willing to give up the leg.

WIFE OF 13 MUST ATTEND SCHOOL

PHILADELPHIA, Sept. 20.—"You must send your wife to school until she is fourteen, or you will be arrested and fined," warned Magistrate Boyle after imposing a fine upon the father-in-law of John Palasio, whose wife, Annie, is only thirteen. The young wife said she had no time to go to school as she had to get her husband's meals.

DESTROYED ALL G. O. P. PAPERS

WASHINGTON, Sept. 30.—Every single letter, every scrap of bookkeeping and all other documents whatsoever bearing upon contributions made to National Republican campaign funds for sixteen years, have been destroyed, according to sworn testimony today before the Senate investigating committee when it resumed its inquiry into the matter.

This testimony was given by Cornelius N. Bliss, son of the late treasurer of the Republican National Committee. Mr. Bliss also told the committee there is no one now living who knows anything about the campaign contributions received by his father. This covers the campaign contributions of 1904, when Colonel Roosevelt was elected for his second term, and who is now charged with having accepted Standard Oil money to help elect him.

William H. Libby, a Standard Oil director, verified the statement that his corporation made a heavy contribution to the Roosevelt campaign of 1904.

Bliss Produces Documents.

Upon taking the stand Mr. Bliss submitted two documents to the committee. One was a report made by an auditor of the accounts of Cornelius N. Bliss, Sr., as treasurer of the Republican National committee. The other was a letter written by Mr. Bliss, Sr., on his resignation as treasurer to Harry S. New, then chairman of the committee. Young Bliss declared that he knew nothing of any contributions to the campaign and that he had not examined the reports except in a casual way.

"Do you know if this report contains the records of receipts of any campaign contribution from the Standard Oil Company, or from John D. Archbold?" asked Chairman Clapp.

"I do not know. There were no names mentioned in the report."

The letter from the elder Bliss contains these statements:

"A great Presidential campaign is a contention for a principle and there is no more need to disclose the contributions there than there would be to make known the movement of opposing armies in war time to each other.

"Statements of Republican receipts and expenditures already published were the emanation of spiteful and diseased minds and did not contain the truth or anything like it.

$3,500,000 in 1896.

"No political campaign has ever been conducted in this country as the Republican campaign of 1904, under the able and conservative management of Mr. Cortelyou. Not a dollar was received which the committee had not a good moral right to receive, and no pledges were made which should not have been made."

The letter showed that in 1904 there was a balance of $107,000 from 1900, and a total of $2,088,000 was obtained in addition. The expenses for that year were $2,000,000.

In 1900 the campaign fund was slightly less than three million dollars.

In 1896, the letter said, a total of $3,500,000 was collected, and in 1892 campaign contributions aggregated $1,600,000, which failed to meet expenses by $100,000.

Two members of the committee then examined three other letters of a semi-private nature which were written by Bliss. The witness said one of the letters was from Theodore Roosevelt to his father. All of the documents were ordered entered in the record.

Bliss stated that his father had destroyed all records pertaining to the campaign contributions of the sixteen years previous to his death, because he feared they might fall into the hands of the enemies of the Republican party.

Bliss said he knew nothing about the letter from Theodore Roosevelt which was supposed to have been destroyed. He had never heard his father speak of Archbold or H. H. Rogers in connection with the campaign fund.

Standard Oil Contributions.

When William H. Libby, a director of the Standard Oil Company, was called to the stand he was questioned by Senator Clapp as to the part taken by the Standard Oil Company in national campaigns.

Q.—Has your attention been called to the articles published in Hearst's Magazine during the past three months? A.—Yes, my attention has been called to them.

Q.—In reference to the campaign of 1904, what do you recall concerning the contributions? A.—I was informed at that time and I still believe that the Standard Oil Company made a very large contribution to the national committee in that year.

Q.—Who was your informant? A.—Mr. H. H. Rogers; he told me that the organization was making a generous gift. I do not recall that the amount was mentioned.

Maybe Longer

By MORTON BIRGE.

I see to the Boss in an easy way,
A kind of a careless air,—
For the Boss himself is a wise old gink—
As though I happened to sort of think,
And not as it mattered a tink a wink,
As though I didn't much care:

"I oughta get off in a short time hence,
A day or two maybe more.
It's something I need to be on the spot.
I may clean it up in a week or not.
I can't say it matters an awful lot,
In fact, it's rather a bore—"

The Boss, he cuts in with a lazy yawn—
"Oh, yes, he is up-to-date—
"Just take what you need, though we can't tell yet
How long a time off you will have to get,
However, I hear you can place a bet
That the Red Sox take four straight."

TRADE ENVOYS OFF FOR TOUR

Mayor Fitzgerald did yeoman service as a volunteer "baggage smasher" at the South Station today at the start of the 2,252-mile "Seeing America" tour of the 420 foreign delegates to the International Congress of Chambers of Commerce.

Accompanied by his daughters Rose and Agnes, the Mayor was present to give a "God-speed" to the departing guests, who left for Worcester shortly after 9 o'clock, in three nine-car trains, the physical value of which was placed at $750,000.

Escorting Mr. and Mrs. K. Max Ritcher and two daughters of Berlin, the Fitzgerald party started from the Copley-Plaza Hotel in the Mayor's auto in ample time to reach the train, only to discover that a number of pieces of the Ritcher baggage had been left behind.

A hurried dash back to the Copley Plaza and the Mayor remedied the mistake, making his appearance at the South Station loaded down with suit cases and smiling.

ROOSEVELT SAYS MARSHALL WAS NAMED BY BOSSES

CHATTANOOGA, Tenn., Sept. 30.—Colonel Roosevelt today attacked Governor Marshall of Indiana as the "candidate of the bosses." He was speaking of Woodrow Wilson's insistence that the nomination for Governor of New York be not dictated by Tammany Hall.

"Mr. Wilson wants—well, I don't know exactly what he wants—but he says he wants a man put up as Governor of New York who is independent of Tammany Hall," said the ex-President, mockingly. "Why, if he wants to interfere with the morality about the Governor of New York, didn't he interfere with the nomination for the Vice-President on his own ticket?

"His candidate is Tom Taggart's man—Tom Taggart, the boss of Indiana. The Taggart machine is not a whit better than the Tammany machine in New York. It's an absurdity," shouted the Colonel, "for Mr. Wilson to assume a position of lofty morality about the Governor of New York, and at the same time let the nomination for the vice-presidency be made through the machine of Indiana."

Edging Bread off the Table

We'll tell you why fresh bread or rolls are the first thing your doctor "cuts out"—when you ask him to relieve your dyspepsia.

It's because he knows that ordinary bread is made of "white" flour—from which part of the nutriment and substances needed in digestion have been removed.

Because the loaf of bread is never cooked long enough to make it easy to digest. It is never more than partly-baked, partly-nourishing "dough."

KELLOGG'S BISCUIT are made of whole-wheat thoroughly cooked through and through, a golden brown inside and outside. They are deliciously flavored, easily digested, and are gradually teaching "particulas" people that the best "bread" needn't look like nor be a loaf. Try a box today—12c at your grocer's.

DAKOTAN AGAIN TESTED ON HOME

By CLEMENT L. POLLOCK.

Dakota Dan, refreshed after four days' freedom from cross-examination, was again called to the witness stand in East Cambridge today in the extraordinary Russell will fight. Attorney Robert Nason had been asking the ranchman about his recollection of the interior of his home in Melrose previous to leaving it twenty-seven years ago.

Dakota Dan, it should be remembered, if he is Daniel Blake Russell, has not been inside the house since he left; if he is an impostor, he never was inside the house.

"Were you as familiar with the grounds and stable," asked Mr. Nason, "as you were with the house?"

"Yes," replied Dakota Dan.

"Will you please draw a diagram of the stable and grounds?"

"I remember it better," said Dakota Dan, "after father fixed it over, putting in a room for Jimmie Axford."

Draws Plan of Stable.

Dakota Dan made a drawing of the stable, marking off the various positions. The Dakotan has drawn plan after plan in this second fight to establish that he is Daniel Blake Russell. He drew the office of the Russell Lumber Company, the plan of the plant at Quincy and sections of the Melrose home. Just how accurate his drawings were has not yet been made. As has been the case before, his drawing today he commented on his work.

"Here," he stated, "stood a post we used to hitch the horse to when we drove into the barn. Outside the barn on this point were three pear trees that you drove past to get into the barn.

Although the hearing has been going on for seven weeks, the interest steadily increases. The old friends of Dakota Dan, say those who are giving him a benefit in Melrose, Wednesday evening, are steadfast in their fidelity to him. Several new faces were seen among the spectators today; they were mostly women. So far as court demonstrations have gone, the women have led in it.

Speaks of Mother.

There was a fine floral display in court today, chrysanthemums and asters predominating. Several pretty girls, who have been almost regular attendants at the trial, carried bouquets of chrysanthemums. Mr. Scharton and Mr. McNally wore asters in their lapels. Neither Mr. Nason, Mr. Upton nor Mr. Almy were florally bedecked.

Once in describing the contents of the stable Dakota Dan's voice took on a tender note—the same sympathetic cadence that it always assumes when speaking of his mother.

"Right here," he said, "stood a buggy. It was an old buggy. It was mother's. It stood there a long time and was seldom used."

Mr. Scharton received, among other letters in the mail today, the following communication, with a newspaper clipping of Dakota Dan, from Gloucester:

This is Dan Blak Russell. I last saw dan twenty-eight or twenty-nine years ago, he old ned. change to much to no him before. God must know him. Ong look I new him. I new family and that is the boy called dan. It is mean for his brother will. He must for god know him.

When Dakota Dan finished his drawing of the stable, Mr. Nason asked:

"How was the basement lighted?"

"I don't remember."

"Could you make a drawing of the stalls in the stable?"

"No," said Dakota Dan. "I would be crazy if I tried to keep the drawing up.

Worked in Boston.

The Dakotan said that the stable had been changed several times.

"I know that once it was so ranged," said Dakta Dan, "that I had to take my pig from over there and led to put it over here. My pig ran in the yard. Then I went to ostos to work and didn't pay much attention to the stable after that."

"You talk of your pig ad chickens—do you mean that you took care of them?"

"Yes, my brother had charge of the flowers and my father gave me the pig, chickens, doves and rabbits to take care of."

Dakota Dan went into details about the chickens and pigs. He told ho weertain parts of the floor were cemented.

"They even cemented my chicken trongbs under the floor," said the Dakotan, "and if you go there and dig up the floor you will find them."

"How many cows did your father have?"

"Two; I used to put them in the stable in the evening."

Now, here is a test of Dakota Dan's knowledge of the old Melrose home Buried under one of the floors of the barn, he says, covered with cement, are a number of chicken troughs. Why not dig them up, as Morgan proposes to dig up Herculaneum treasures, and test the truth of the claimant's story? The claimant also described a subway that was built when he was a boy to allow the chickens to get from their yard to the barn.

DEMAND ULSTER BE OMITTED FROM THE HOME RULE BILL

LONDON, Sept. 30.—An article written by Frederick E. Smith, member of the House of Commons for the Walton Division of Liverpool, appears in the Manchester Daily Dispatch. Mr. Smith declares:

"The plain truth is, and the sooner it is understood the better, there are only two alternatives open to the government. The first is to keep Ulster in the Home Rule bill, with the certainty of civil violence on a far greater scale than has been witnessed in Ireland for centuries; the second is, to leave Ulster out of the bill."

Mr. Smith argues that the latter plan would necessitate an entirely new bill, and that it is very doubtful whether Mr. Redmond would accept or those who control him in Ireland would permit him to accept such a bill.

No "Mr." for Mayor of Malden; Mayor Fitzgerald Warned

Mayor Fitzgerald has been gently but firmly reminded that when he addresses Dr. George L. Farrell, the chief executive of Malden, in the future, it must be as "Mayor."

Recently in dictating a letter to Mayor Farrell of Malden, the Mayor of Boston or his stenographer unintentionally left off the title "Mayor" and addressed the letter in this manner:

"Mr. George L. Farrell, Malden, Mass. Dear Sir:"

Mayor Farrell smeared with ink the "Mr." and "Sir" and returned the original letter, underlining it thus:

"Great, Miss Stenographer."

Mayor Farrell also sent a letter addressed, "Mr. John F. Fitzgerald, School Street, Boston, Mass., and underlining the address on the face of the envelope in this way: "How does this look, Miss Stenographer?"

The Mayor attributes the mistake to a new stenographer, but he is incensed at the manner in which the Malden chief executive resented the accidental slight.

SECOND COUNCILLOR FIGURES STILL SHY; CANDIDATES WORRY

Six days after the primary election the Democrats of the Second Councillor district are awaiting returns as to who is their nominee for the Governor's Council. Henry J. Dixon, of Ward 20, one of the Democratic candidates, wants to know the final returns. Some of the Democratic leaders are of the opinion that John F. Ratigan, of Hyde Park, is the nominee. The district extends from Dorchester to New Bedford, and takes in the Attleboros and Taunton. The Boston returns are in, but returns from other cities and towns are lacking.

On the Republican end Guay A. Ham, of Dorchester, is apparently the nominee, but Herbert W. Burt, his opponent, had to rely upon figures furnished by Ham to discover he was defeated.

Brooks Adams, of Quincy, a descendant of John Quincy Adams, will probably be the Bull Moose nominee.

DISMANTLING OLD HARVARD LIBRARY

Active work on the dismantling of the Harvard library has begun. Automobiles are being used to transport the 1,500,000 books and pamphlets contained in the present Harvard library to other places, where they will be stored until the opening of the Harry Elkins Widener library in 1914. The books are to be distributed among thirty-nine reference rooms and special libraries, the main library remaining, for the time being, at Randall Hall.

ON PROBATION FOR ART THEFT

Daniel O. Lavery, age twenty-nine, of Brooklyn, N. Y., salesman, was placed on probation by Judge Williams in the Roxbury District Court today on condition that restitution be made to the Museum of Fine Arts. Lavery stole a number of costly miniatures and Japanese boxes, the property of the museum, valued at $1,730. Lavery was represented by C. A. Beckford, and his two sisters from Brooklyn testified in his behalf. It is thought that the restitution will amount to about $300. It was the first theft from the museum. Lavery peddled his stolen treasures in the Public Garden and in Boston stores. A number have been recovered and bought back by the museum.

Taft and Hammond Talk Politics After Play on the Links

BEVERLY, Sept. 30.—President Taft and John Hays Hammond had a go on the Myopia links together today, both trying for a win and "Colonel Bogey." At luncheon they discussed the political outlook. Mr. Hammond is the head of the National Young Men's Republican Clubs.

Tonight the President is feted in Beverly, first as the guest of the Beverly Republican Club, in its newly fitted up rooms on Cabot street, and later as the guest of Liberty Lodge of Masons.

At Farramanta the following callers were received by the President this afternoon: Major Thomas L. Harrison of New York, an old friend of the President; J. R. Babcock, secretary of the Chamber of Commerce of Dallas, Texas; P. J. Flannery of Chicago, president of the International Brotherhood of Freight Handlers; Captain M. D. Townsend of New York, William Burger of Trenton, N. J., and Judge Frank Feuncile of the Panama Canal zone.

MARTIN H. GLYNN IS BOOMED FOR NEW YORK GOVERNORSHIP

SYRACUSE, N. Y., Sept. 30.—Alton B. Parker, former Democratic presidential candidate, will be selected tonight by the Democratic State Committee to preside at the convention which opens here tomorrow. Judge Parker was made temporary chairman of the Baltimore convention over the protest of W. J. Bryan, who has recently advocated the elimination of Charles F. Murphy by the party in New York State.

The selection of Martin H. Glynn of Albany as temporary chairman started a boom for him for the gubernatorial nomination this afternoon and there were rumors that Mr. Murphy would decide not to support Governor Dix for another nomination. The different progressive factions favor Glynn, and may throw their support to him in the convention if he agrees to enter the race.

NEED LINGUISTS SAYS THE MAYOR

Mayor Fitzgerald today gave out a statement congratulating the citizens of Boston on the splendid welcome they gave the delegates to the International Chamber of Commerce Congress. He declared that everywhere is heard nothing but praise for the hospitality extended by the city and State to the visitors. The Mayor said also that the Congress demonstrated the need of knowledge of foreign languages, particularly Spanish and Portuguese. The Mayor in his statement says:

"The citizens of Boston are to be congratulated upon the success of the Fifth International Chambers of Commerce Convention. Whose delegates have just taken their departure from the city. The Boston Chamber of Commerce certainly did itself proud, and Boston's citizens owe them a debt of gratitude for the splendid manner in which the affair was handled.

"The State of Massachusetts and the city of Boston, which appropriated $25,000 each for the conduct of the congress and the entertainment of the visitors, are also deserving of thanks.

"One of the lessons that we can all draw from the Congress is the necessity for a wider knowledge of the languages of the world. It seems to me that French, German, Spanish and Italian should be even more generally spoken here than is the case at the present time.

"In view of the opening of the Panama Canal, and the opportunity thus afforded for closer relations with South America, the visit of these men at this time was very opportune.

"The Portuguese language, which is spoken in Brazil, might be taken up in manufacturing cities. This is particularly true of New Bedford. If the Portuguese boys and girls, with their knowledge of the Portuguese language, could be developed with a view of making them ambassadors of trade with Brazil, it would be of great benefit."

Has a Hen Any Rights? Owners to Meet in Melrose

What rights has a hen?

This question will be discussed at a meeting of hen fanciers in Fraternity Hall, Melrose, tonight. The hen-owners are indignant because the Board of Health has been given full power to regulate the keeping of hens and because the aldermen have levied a tax of twenty-five cents on every hen keeper in the city.

Recent rules adopted by the Aldermen require strict examination of all hen yards by the Board of Health at frequent intervals. In addition, persons keeping fowl must obtain the written consent of their neighbors to keep them before the Board of Health will grant a license. An attempt is to be made to have the Aldermen repeal the rules, which poultry keepers declare obnoxious. Failing in this the poultry keepers will fight the rules until some favorable action is tak

ELKS SEND $100 TO STAHL FUND

Mr. Fan. This is a little advice to you. You were told yesterday that the Jake Stahl automobile fund was growing. You will be surprised to learn that during the past twenty-four hours, or during Sunday, that fund has increased $139. This is a big amount to raise in one day—and particularly on Sunday. The checks still continue to flow into the AMERICAN office. It looks as though everybody in New England would contribute before the fund is closed.

The real big contribution is $100, from the Boston Benevolent and Protective Order of Elks.

Exalted Ruler Major P. F. O'Keefe says:

"The Boston Elks will give that sum to the Jake Stahl auto fund. He deserves it, and every Elk I have met is in sympathy with the movement."

The Boston Elks, under the leadership of Major O'Keefe, are making elaborate plans to attend the World's Series and root for the Red Sox. They will have a band. The noise they will make will wake up the whole Back Bay.

James A. Gallivan, the old-time Harvard baseball player and member of the Jake Stahl auto committee, sends a check for $10. He believes the Red Sox will win the World's Series. There are thousands of others who share the same opinion.

Another Friend of Jake's.

Vogel & Co., managers of the Kaiserhof restaurant, on Hanover street, send a check for $10. Manager Burroughs says: "Many of the Red Sox rooters have been in the cafe. They all say the Red Sox will win. There is no reason why they shouldn't. Give the team support. I am pleased to send this small amount in order to swell the auto fund for Jake Stahl."

Another $10 check comes from the Martin Hotel Company, operating Maxim's on Harrison avenue. E. G. Genoud, one of the managers, announces that the hotel is making arrangements to handle the baseball crowd that will be in the Hub for the World's Series. He says special music and a special menu will be in order. "Here's that the Red Sox may win," he says.

E. L. Cauley, a former Alderman and proprietor of several cigar stores in the down-town section, adds $5 to the fund. He has always been a "fan" and will attend every game the Red Sox plays in this city during the series. "We cannot do enough for the team," he says. Other contributions are:

L. P. Woolf, 109 Court street	$2
George Durham, St. John's, N. B.	1
Roy Dalrymple, Wilford	.50
Malge	.50

Of course, it is evident that the success of the auto fund movement is assured. Baseball fans are liberal. They are appreciative. They are loyal. When one says that he says all.

Remember that in order to have the fund a complete success, more money must be raised. Your twenty-five cents is appreciated. It only takes four contributions like yours to make a dollar. All contributions will be acknowledged in the AMERICAN. Do not give money to any person other than a committeeman or authorized member of the AMERICAN staff.

Good Example to Follow.

The men who figure in today's story are setting a fine example to hundreds of others. They have followed the success of the Red Sox from the start of the season. They have seen the boys win game after game until they brought home the pennant. Most of these men are business men intimate with the ball players. They are loyal to the Red Sox. It is up to you to be the same.

The committee that has been named by the fans to handle the work of raising money will get down to business today. Then you may expect real action. It will be work from the start, because every man on that committee is a worker. Every one of them realizes what it means for Boston to have a pennant team. You can trust them to make the Jake Stahl auto fund movement a howling success.

Now is your time. Send along your check. Do not put this important business off until tomorrow.

Captain Abeles, of the Harvard crew, has ordered candidates to report for Fall rowing practice on Wednesday. Coach Wray is on hand to take charge of affairs. Three members of last year's victorious crew, besides Captain Abeles, the coxswain, are available in Mills, Goodale and Reynolds. The Fall rowing season will last about a month and will end with a race between the various crews of the varsity squad. There will also be the usual bumping races between crews of the college dormitories.

DAVE SMITH TO MEET LEO HOUCK

By JACK CONWAY.

DAVE SMITH, a healthy young boxer who hails from far away Australia, will make his debut in a Boston ring on Wednesday evening, when he exchanges punches with Leo Houck in a twelve round contest at the Pilgrim A. A. David is rated as a real fighter in the land of the kangaroo and is now permitted to sign "middleweight champion" after his name when he is in Australia.

Smith first got his name into the American sporting prints when he won on a foul from Billy Papke, the ex-Illinois thunderbolt, at Sydney, in December, 1910. At the time Papke was recognized as the middleweight champion of the world.

Papke claimed that Smith's victory was a fluke. He asserted that Dave would be beaten by the first good man that he met. Some enterprising promoter then arranged a match between Smith and Jimmy Clabby of Milwaukee.

* * *

IT will be remembered that James is the boy who has been anxious to get a date with Mike Gibbons and who was signed to meet Houck but who flunked out of the match at the last moment. Well, to make a long story short, Smith outpointed Clabby in twenty rounds.

Smith has since been referred to as the Australian "Wildcat." He has lived up to his reputation in his bouts in Sydney but has not fared as well in this country. "Cyclone" Johnny Thompson was another mitt wielder who went down to defeat before Smith. Papke won from Smith on a knockout in seven rounds when they met for the second time.

* * *

AUSTRALIA is a wonderful country for boxers. Bouts are permitted in all of the big cities, and the contests are attended by large crowds. Smith was a good drawing card, but after he had heard of the fabulous purses that promoters were offering in New York, he decided to venture forth into the land of promise.

Shortly after arriving in New York, Smith signed to battle with Eddie McGoorty. He had not become acclimated and he unfortunately selected as his opponent one of the toughest of the American middleweight crop. The result was that Dave was sent to the canvas for the fatal count in the very first round.

NEW RECORD FOR M'GRATH.

NEW YORK, Sept. 30.—Matt McGrath, the world's champion hammer thrower, added a new world's record to his string at Celtic Park. He threw the sixteen-pound hammer with unlimited run and follow 191 feet and 3 inches. The former record was 180 feet 1 inch, made by J. J. Flanagan on the same grounds three years ago.

NO LET-UP IN HARVARD WORK

There will be no let-up today in football practice at Harvard. Saturday's game showed the need of power in the centre of the line, and of more variety in attack. The coaches will therefore start the week with hard drilling.

Candidates for the three middle positions in the line will get a thorough workout in the rudiments of line-play, blocking, breaking through and tackling. The backs will in all probability try out some new plays, with greater attention to the forward pass. Of course Harvard does not expect to go through the season with nothing in its repertoire but line-bucking, as shown in the Maine game.

Another part of the Harvard machine that needs coaching and practice is the kicking department. Felton and Hardwick both seemed to be trying for an altitude record Saturday when they punted. Their kicks seldom went over 30 yards. Logan's only try for a goal from the field was unsuccessful, but should not be taken as an example of his ability, besides the pass was very poor. Still the booting of the team must be stronger if Harvard is to have a well-rounded eleven.

$700,000 Ball Park for Chicago Cubs

CHICAGO, Sept. 30.—The Chicago Nationals will start next season with a new steel and concrete grandstand, to cost $700,000, and with a capacity of 60,000. It was announced by President Murphy. Twelve thousand will have to stand when a capacity crowd is present and arrangements to prevent those standing from interfering with the vision of those seated are novel. A subway about eighteen inches deep is to be excavated in front of bleachers and stands. When all accommodations are required, the last-comers will have to stand in this "dugout."

Chance Hasn't Been Told He's Deposed

CHICAGO, Sept. 30.—Frank L. Chance, manager of the Chicago National League Baseball Club, says he had received no official notice that he had been deposed from the position by President Murphy of the club.

Chance said that the operation he recently underwent in New York for the removal of a blood clot in his spinal canal was a complete success and that he expected to play ball all next season.

PILGRIMS OPEN WITH DODGERS

The Boston Pilgrims arrived home yesterday for the final spurt of the season. The Brooklyn Trolley Dodgers will be the attraction at the South End grounds for the next three days and then the Phillies will come here for a three-days' stay to wind up the season.

In the recent home games Manager Kling's boys have fared quite well, and Kling will send his boys out to cop more than their share in the next six games.

A wintry blast greeted the Pilgrims on their return and all indications point towards very low attendance unless the weather man comes along with some better baseball weather.

The Pilgrims are coming here with one of their stars out of the lineup in Bill Sweeney, who was spiked in the first game over in New York. Kling has put a rooter, Schultz, in Sweeney's position and he is no dub—has come very good work.

Joe Wood to Pitch One More Game

Will Then Be Ready for Giants

By L. R. MURDOCH.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 30.—Jake Stahl gave his ball players the first of their final tryouts for the world series today. He hooked them up with the Senators and told them to play fast baseball. He will keep them at it today and tomorrow, increasing their speed gradually. If there are no postponements, he will give them a day of rest Wednesday, after which they will finish in a flourishing wind-up with the Athletics at Philadelphia.

The American League new champions will take two days off—Sunday and Monday—before going over to the Polo Grounds for the final test of the year.

Stahl will use Joe Wood in one game before then, if his present plans are not changed, but it will be only with the object of keeping Joe on edge for the grind with the World Series. In New York they hold Wood in such respect that astute "fans" have suggested working some of the lesser lights of McGraw's staff on the opening day, thereby presenting the first game substantially, to the Sox. Their idea is that Wood cannot work at top speed with only one day layoff and that by saving the best of the Giants string over the first day, they can possibly pick up the second game from Collins or which ever other man may represent Boston, besides pitting a fresh man against Wood, if Joe pitches in the third struggle.

Wood Not Overworked.

This is not altogether bad "dope," as it remains to be seen whether Wood can come back as strong in a third day's game as he is likely to be on the first day. He has not been asked that question this year and when it was put up to him in the world series he showed that he could not boast so much speed in his "come-back" trials. Few of them can.

But Wood has not been overworked this year, and is an older and huskier lad than he was a year ago. ALSO it rains frequently in the October days, which might help Joe a whole lot—if he needs anything like help.

All the expert ball players of John McGraw's staff—Christy Mathewson, Rube Marquard and "Chief" Meyers—who are writing stories for the newspapers telling how the Giants may beat the Red Sox cheerfully overlook all of the points of superiority of the Red Sox over the Giants as ball players, pure and simple, and pin what faith they express in the belief that John McGraw, their boss, will outgeneral Jake Stahl, the Red Sox boss, in the series for the Championship of the world next week.

Jumping over the suggestion that it is only natural for a young ball player—anybody, for that matter—in public to "boost" his boss and to rely upon his boss to supply the "ammunition"—if he boss has designed that, in order to find comfort in what is to come the Giants MUST overlook all of the "dope" comparing with the Red Sox, let us forget the dope and see if it is likely that McGraw WILL outgeneral Stahl.

Mack Outgeneralled McGraw.

To begin with, McGraw was beaten in every point of strategy by Connie Mack in the last World's Series, and besides that Connie Mack had the better ball players on his staff.

This same Connie Mack, who certainly has lost none of his cunning with another year's crop of gray hairs decorating his brow, has been in turn outgeneralled by the same Jake Stahl in every series that the Red Sox and Athletics have played this year, beginning with the very first, when the Red Sox, not yet in condition, and suffering from the sting of wholesale defeat at the hands of the then second-place Senators—whom the Red Sox are playing now—fairly took the measure of Mack, then world's champions.

That series meant more to both Mack and his Athletics and Stahl and his Red Sox than all followers of baseball knew at the time. Mack and Stahl are both "silent" bosses. They do not tell what they are thinking about. But both men have since admitted that they put more grey matter and more baseball into that series than they expected at any other time in the year.

And Stahl's ball players not only beat Mack's ball players, but Stahl, very successfully advised by "Heinie" Wagner and Bill Carrigan, outgeneralled Mack.

Jake Stahl a "Silent" Boss.

So Mack, whose baseball brains were infinitely better working order than John McGraw's were in October 1911, found another man with some baseball brains who mastered him in 1912, and continued his mastery persistently and consistently on every occasion when they met thereafter.

Will John McGraw, then, outgeneral Jake Stahl next week?

The "dope" says that he will not, just as the "dope" on all the baseball players on their respective payrolls show the Red Sox to be better men in all departments of the game than McGraw's Giants are.

If this business of managing a baseball team, you must remember, now that Jake Stahl had the sense this year to realize that he had a great team and handled it so who could work out their own salvation if left to their own devices on the playing field, in other words he did not affect them with too much managing.

While Johnny McGraw is no Spring chicken in the National pastime, neither is Jake Stahl, and while McGraw has spent many years in the game baseball. It is not so intricate a sport that it cannot be mastered as thoroughly in the years that Stahl, Wagner and Carrigan have devoted to its study. Wagner has spent eleven years on the diamond, Stahl nearly as many and any man who cannot learn about all there is in the national game in that period ought to have quit before he began.

Marquard Compares Giants and Sox

He Gives McGraw's Men Best of It

Record Breaking Pitcher Confident National League Champions Will Win Series.

By RUBE MARQUARD.

Giants Great Pitcher.

It is the fashion to make predictions as to the winner of the World's Series. I am going to vary the custom to some extent by confining myself largely to comparisons of the Giants and the Red Sox as I see them from a study of the "dope." Now, I can't say I believe much in the "dope" as applied to a short series of seven games, in which the element of luck sometimes overshadows skill—by which I mean that the average fan considers weaker than the Athletics of last year, although Connie Mack, who leads the Athletics, is quoted as saying that the Stahl aggregation is a better club than the one he had in 1911. Mack should know.

I feel confident that the Giants will defeat the Sox, and it is a confidence born of the honest belief that we have the best ball club. The wish, in my case, is father to the thought.

I think it will be conceded that we have the greatest manager in the game today, and therein lies a tremendous advantage in our favor at the outset. McGraw has proven himself a wonderful baseball general, and will have an indelible impress upon the game. I believe he is the greatest single asset that New York has in the coming series.

The Giants this year are stronger than the Giants who lost the world's championship fight last Fall. It is the same team, true enough, but it is a team of greater experience, which is something the Athletics had on us in 1911. In point of years it is a team even younger than the Boston Sox, but our boys are now veterans in point of experience. That will help.

The pitchers of the two clubs have been discussed quite frequently and from so many different angles, that I don't feel there is anything I can add that would be of interest. Besides, I feel some hesitancy about comparing the men in my own line of work. I'll leave that to some one else, and talk about the clubs as I see them from a close inspection of the figures.

McGraw says that figgers don't lie. Now, of course, figures based on a season's work cannot have much bearing on a series of seven games, but I am using them to show, in a general way, how the players compare. A man might come into the league and hit .450 for two weeks, or a month, and wind up the season with an average of about .210. It has often happened. A player who hits but .250 on the season, and who couldn't steal a base with assistance, may be the star of the World's Series, while the Ty Cobbs prove a total failure.

I want to say, in passing, that everything which has been printed about the ability of "Smoky" Joe Wood is true. He is a great pitcher. I know, because I used to pitch against him down in the American Association when he was with Kansas City, and I was a member of the Indianapolis club. Whenever our teams came together Joe and I were always matched for a battle.

However, I want to discuss the other players in their order, and we will drop the pitchers with the statement that I believe McGraw is as well, if not a little better fortified with Matheweson, Tesreau, Ames, Crandall, Wiltse and your humble servant as Stahl is with Wood, Bedient, O'Brien, Collins and Hall.

Fred Merkle is now conceded to be one of the greatest first basemen in the country. He would be ranked by any unbiased expert among the first three. His work as "doorkeeper" for the Giants has been a big feature during the two championship years of the team. This season he has been hitting about .300 right along, conditions being about that mark, and occasionally falling a few points below.

As against Merkle's .300 batting average—it was really .301 the last time I saw the figures—Stahl also hits about .300, and Merkle has the advantage at that particular point in the line-up. Merkle is much faster than the Sox leader on the bases and on service. He has stolen 30 bases against Jake's 11. He has scored 87 runs against Stahl's 37—I'm basing my figures on the table issued last Friday, September 27. Merkle had played 123 games against Stahl's 89 up to that time.

I believe we have it all over the Sox at first base.

Between Larry Doyle and Steve Yerkes there is no argument. Doyle is today the greatest second baseman in the National League. Doyle hits .328, against Yerkes' .247. He has stolen 34 bases, while Steve has stolen less than half a dozen on Morehead's figures last week while he scored 97 runs against Yerkes' 69.

Doyle is far more aggressive than Yerkes; he has fielded in remarkable form all season, and while he is not much older than the Bostonian, if as old, he has had much more experience.

At shortstop Wagner of the Sox has nothing on our Arthur Fletcher in the figures. Wagner hits .296, while Fletcher is banging the ball for .266. Wagner has stolen 20 bases against Fletcher's 12.

I was going to give you an argument at third base, too, but I guess that is unnecessary now in view of the work of Charley Herzog lately.

There is no discounting Gardner's ability. Like Herzog, he was not originally a third baseman, but he has been made over into a great player at that corner. His hitting puts him in the class of Frank Baker, the man who made such a wonderful showing in the world's series last year. I would consider Gardner the most dangerous man among the Sox at bat, next to Tris Speaker.

As for Duffy Lewis and Harry Hooper, the figures do not show that they outclass our outfielders to any great extent. Lewis hits .273, while we have Josh Devore and Murray hitting .266 and .267 respectively with Snodgrass whaling the ball at .258. Hooper taps a light .248.

In the fielding line, I doubt if the Bostonians will show our gardeners anything in a short series. The Sox outfielders are noted for their throwing, but that is also the Giants' long suit. No man in the world can shoot the ball better than John Murray, and no man in the world can do any more spectacular fielding than that same "Red."

BIG PURSES AT BROCKTON FAIR

Fifteen thousand dollars will be given in purses for the Brockton Fair horse races, which will be the greatest from many viewpoints, that the fair has ever presented. He Figures New Yorkers Much Stronger Than Last Year and Banks on His Manager.

Yerkes; he has fielded in remarkable form all season, and while he is not much older than the Bostonian, if as old, he has had much more experience.

At shortstop Wagner of the Sox has nothing on our Arthur Fletcher in the figures. Wagner hits .296, while Fletcher is banging the ball for .266. Wagner has stolen 20 bases against Fletcher's 12.

I was going to give you an argument at third base, too, but I guess that is unnecessary now in view of the work of Charley Herzog lately.

There is no discounting Gardner's ability. Like Herzog, he was not originally a third baseman, but he has been made over into a great player at that corner. His hitting puts him in the class of Frank Baker, the man who made such a wonderful showing in the world's series last year. I would consider Gardner the most dangerous man among the Sox at bat, next to Tris Speaker.

As for Duffy Lewis and Harry Hooper, the figures do not show that they outclass our outfielders to any great extent. Lewis hits .273, while we have Josh Devore and Murray hitting .266 and .267 respectively with Snodgrass whaling the ball at .258. Hooper taps a light .248.

In the fielding line, I doubt if the Bostonians will show our gardeners anything in a short series. The Sox outfielders are noted for their throwing, but that is also the Giants' long suit. No man in the world can shoot the ball better than John Murray, and no man in the world can do any more spectacular fielding than that same "Red."

SPEAKER PASSED BY JACKSON IN BATTING

Tris Speaker suffered a slump in batting last week and is now third in the American League list, he having been passed by Jackson of Cleveland. Tris isn't bothering about his average these days, as he only made five hits last week. His eyes are focussed on the world's series and he is dreaming on the subject of "How to Beat the Giants." The averages of the five leaders are:

Cobb, Detroit	.409
Jackson, Cleveland	.391
Speaker, Boston	.387
Lajoie, New York	.370
Lajoie, Cleveland	.369

WOMEN PLAYING FOR GOLF HONOR

MANCHESTER-BY-THE-SEA, Sept. 30.—Play started this morning over the links of the Essex County Country Club in the eighteenth National golf championship for women. The field is composed of sixty of the best players in the country, and while the East has by far the most representatives, the West has enough experts to cause trouble if everything goes well.

Miss Eleanor Allen and Miss Margery Davis of Boston were the first scheduled to leave the tee and drive off the starting time, 10 a. m., the other members of the golfing family assembled here left at five-minute intervals.

Special interest in the match was aroused by the fact that a score under ninety will prove low. All of the leading players are capable of going well under this figure, but somehow in qualification rounds low scoring is seldom done.

Plunging Game Won't Do, Coach Yost Says

ANN ARBOR, Mich., Sept. 30.—"A good quarterback who knows how to mix his plays and can open up the game when he needs to will do a lot for the team under the new rules," said Fielding H. Yost, head coach of the University of Michigan football team. "A straight, plunging game will not have the advantage in many cases that it did. Of course the unrestricted forward pass will help a lot, but a proper mixture of the old style plunging tactics and the newer open game will produce the results.

"Four downs will help a lot, but you still have two and a half yards to gain on a down, and under the old rules there were many times that a team couldn't take that extra two-thirds it needed to make its distance."

WAIVERS ON BROWN.

CHICAGO, Sept. 30.—Waivers have been asked on Mordecai Brown by the Chicago Nationals. The pitcher injured his knee in wishing a ten-inning game last July and since that mishap has been of no use to the club.

Warning Against Speculators

New Rules for World's Series

CINCINNATI, Sept. 30.—The National Commission has issued a list of players eligible for the World's Series (already printed in the AMERICAN) and has also formulated additional rules to govern the series as follows:

"The public is cautioned against paying higher prices for admission than those fixed by the commission, which has the hearty co-operation from the municipal authorities of each city in the suppression of ticket scalping.

"Play will begin on each grounds at 2 p. m.

"A rain check coupon will be attached to every ticket placed on sale.

"A scheduled game, postponed for legal cause, called before it becomes a regulation game or terminating with the score tied, shall, unless the schedule explicitly provides to the contrary be played off on the grounds for which it was scheduled before the succeeding scheduled game for the other city shall be contested, and the dates assigned for subsequent games shall, thereupon, be moved forward.

"Before the commencement of the sixth game the commission shall determine by lot when and where the seventh game shall be played, in the event that an additional game be required to decide the winner of the series.

Umpires Supreme.

"The umpires, whose authority in these contests shall be supreme, shall be sole judges of the fitness of the grounds for commencing or continuing a game and shall eject from the field any player who uses improper language, employs unfair tactics or violates any rule for the conduct of the game.

"Spectators will not be permitted to encroach or stand on the playing field at any point. A club that plans to accommodate patrons in excess of the regular seating capacity of its plant is required to erect, with the approval of the municipal authorities and permission of the commission, safe, temporary stands of circus seats, with a strong three-foot railing in front thereof extending from the grandstand or skirting the outfield.

"The team that wins the world's championship is required to disband immediately thereafter, and its members are forbidden to participate as individuals or as a team in exhibition games during the year in which such World's Series was decided.

"The players' pool shall be restricted to fifty per cent. of the receipts of the first four games after the deduction of the commission's 10 per cent. thereof, regardless of whether one or more of such games shall result in a tie.

The Players' Pool.

"A day during the following championship season, to be agreed on by the commission and the victorious club, shall be designated for the presentation of the championship emblem provided by the commission.

"A certified check for $10,000, payable to the order of the chairman of the Commission, shall be deposited with the secretary by each qualifying club three days before the commencement of the series, as a guarantee that it will, as provided in Section 10 of the Joint regulations for the government of the World's Series, faithfully carry out all of the provisions of these rules and regulations and such others that the commission may hereafter make to govern such contest and that it will not exercise the arbitrary right or privilege of abandoning the series until it has been completed and the championship determined. Such certified check or so much of its face value, as the commission may deem adequate to the funds of the commission, if on investigation a club is adjudged to have violated any of its obligations.

"Neither of the contesting clubs shall give or pay any bonus or prize to any or all of its players before or after the completion of the series."

The official scorers appointed by the commission are Francis C. Richter of Philadelphia and J. Taylor Spink of St. Louis.

The National Commission with its business representative, umpires, official scorers and respective owners of the contesting clubs will meet in New York on Monday, October 7, when special instructions will be given to officials and club owners.

Try Out Course for Auto Cup Races

MILWAUKEE, Sept. 30.—Practice was begun today over the Wau Watosa automobile course for the gasoline automobile races which will begin here Wednesday with the Vanderbilt cup.

The course has been put in good condition, and the weather conditions are infinitely better than they were two weeks ago, when the races had to be postponed because of heavy rains.

Fred J. Wagner, the official starter, after inspecting the track, said that it is twenty miles faster than it was two weeks ago.

Southern Papers May Bar Johnson's Name

NEW ORLEANS, La., Sept. 30.—A Nashville, Tenn., editor has started a movement to bar the name of Jack Johnson, the pugilist, from Southern newspapers and today every editor in this city received a letter from Nashville bearing such request. The Nashville editor declares that in marrying the white woman who recently killed herself Johnson offered an affront to every white woman in the land.

THE BOSTON AMERICAN'S DAILY DOUBLE

The Manicure Lady

By WILLIAM F. KIRK

"GEORGE," asked the Manicure Lady, "What is a 'hallucination'?" I had an argument about it with the old gent last night. He said it meant where a fellow had to get cats in his garret and he all the time thinking somebody was chasing him. Brother Wilfred must have one of them things if that is the truth, because, goodness knows, George, there is more than one chasing him—all creditors and collectors. But do get back to the word 'hallucination.' I told the old gent that he was mistaken. I told him it meant what the doctors do to all the kids at school when there is a smallpox scare. Was I right?"

"As near right as you ever get, kiddo," said the Head Barber sweetly. "The old gent, as you call the father that brought you into the world to sharpen orangesticks was right. You was wrong. 'Vaccination' was the word you was thinking about."

"You're the old original corrector, ain't you, George?" sneered the Manicure Lady. "If you had been living just before the flood I wish I could have saw you around telling Noah how to build the Ark and how to herd all them animals into the boat in pairs, so he wouldn't get confused. Of all the sure thing, know-it-all guys that ever lived, you are the cream.

"But I must tell you about the hallucination that I had the other night. The doctor told me so afterward, anyhow, and he called it a hallucination. I hollered so loud in my sleep that I woke myself up. There was cold sweat all over my womanly brow. My hands was shaking like the hands of a murder car chauffeur making his getaway. Some strange fear clutched me, George; one of them vagabond, indefinite fears that them novelists tells about, and, whether you believe it or not, I couldn't budge a inch. When I was a kid I read all that Dante's Furnace, or whatever they call it, and seen the illustrations by a man named Gustave Gats or Gustave Dore, or something like that, but you can bet your life, George, that they wasn't half so terrible as the dream I had, the hallucination I was telling you about."

"Well, young lady, would you mind telling me about the hallucination that you had?" asked the Head Barber.

"Sure I will tell you, George," was the answer. "I dreamed that I was a barber!"

"You like to kid, don't you?" said the Head Barber after a moment of silence. "Why don't you tell about a dream that really happened, if you want to talk about dreams? Instead of talking up and telling me a lot about real nightmares, you have got to be a clown to try and get my goat. Now, I will tell you a real nightmare, one that I had the other night.

"Oh, let's hear it, George. What was it?"

"Only another dream," said the Head Barber. "I dreamed that I was a Manicure Lady!"

In the Business

Motoring from town, Mr. Drolby entered a tiny cottage on the roadside and politely asked the favor of a bucket of water for his engine.

On the table in the little parlor lay a pencilled sketch, and the motorist looked at it with keen interest.

"Why, that's quite good!" he remarked patronizingly.

"Yes, sir," replied the old woman; "I'm glad to hear you say so. My son drew it the other day."

"Well, it certainly shows promise," remarked the motorist. "The little fellow should be encouraged. I should like to have a talk with him."

"I'm sorry, sir," chimed in the cottager, "but he ain't here; he's up in Lunnon."

"Oh, is he? What's he doing up there?"

"He's been a magazine illustrator for ten years."

Explained

A school teacher, who was giving a lesson on "The Feeding of Children," was interrupted by one of his pupils.

"Please, sir," he said, "Jimmy says he knew a baby was brought up on elephant's milk, and it gained ten pounds in weight every day."

"Jimmy ought to tell you such rubbish," said the teacher. "Whose baby was it that was brought up on elephant's milk?"

"Please, sir," answered Jimmy, "it was the elephant's!"

"My Secret of Beauty Is—Mother," Says Pretty Madge Kennedy

By Margaret Hubbard Ayer

IT would be difficult to find any one who looks less like the stereotyped actress, or like what one thinks an actress ought to look off or on the stage, than little Miss Brown. I mean little Miss Madge Kennedy.

A wise girl could be as unsophisticated as that," said the hatchet-faced female who sat next to me at the theatre and watched that ingenuous young person rush through the adventures of the screamingly funny farce.

The vinegary lady should have been with me when I visited Miss Brown at her apartment the next day.

I can't help calling her Miss Brown. Every one does.

"Nobody calls me Miss Kennedy any more," she said, as she led me into her sitting room and settled herself opposite me in a great big chair.

"I am Miss Brown to everybody now, but I really don't mind if only they like the play."

An Instant Appeal.

There was something so simple, so straightforward, so girlish about the little figure in the big chair that it made an instant appeal, just as the frank and honest little heroine does in the play.

She looks as all girls ought to look, absolutely natural; there was not a trace of make-up on her face, and the brown hair with the pretty reddish lights was coiled closely around the well shaped head in a pretty, youthful fashion, just about as she wears it on the stage.

She had on a simple white shirtwaist and a dark skirt, and the high school girls who pass by the window on their way to school could not be less affected, less stagey in their manner, nor more suitably dressed, than the little girl who has set all Broadway talking, and who doesn't look over seventeen.

"I am really scared to death to be interviewed," confessed little Miss Brown, and she looked at me with those great big eyes, rather dreading the question I was going to ask her.

When it dawned upon her that she was to figure as a mine of information on the subject of "How to Be Beautiful," she threw back her head and roared with glee, and was not to be pinned down at all to any methods of diet, or delsarte, which are supposed to improve on nature.

Her Secret

"You can say that the secret of me and whatever I am that is worth while is my mother," said Miss Kennedy, after awhile.

"She has done it all. I have the most wonderful mother in the world, and it's she who looks after me, who takes care of me, and who sees that I am healthy and happy.

"I'm pretty husky as it is, you know, though I'm afraid the word isn't elegant; it's the only one that applies to my condition of health. I was brought up in California, and everything there seems to grow strong and big and vigorous. Most of the girls are large, for all of them live out-of-doors, and ride, drive and swim, and are constantly in the open air.

"That's the worst thing about coming East, and living in an apartment. I've never lived in one before, and you know when I first came here I felt as if I was caged, like the little country child who was suddenly brought to an apartment, and rushed wildly up and down the wide hall, all day long, crying, 'Let me out, let me out.'

"That's the way I felt, for we'd always been used to living in a house with lots of outdoor grounds and plenty of breathing space. It seems a terrible thing to live in a city and not to be able to see the sky. I have to lean out of the window and crane my neck to see the stars.

An Outdoor Girl

"I'm used to seeing the sky a lot, and you know I really miss that," said little Miss Brown confidingly. She looks like a girl who was friends with the sky in all kinds of weather, and with all the outdoor things that grow.

"Well, I'm getting used to being caged, though I go to the window every now and then or out of doors to get a glimpse of the sky to be sure that it's still there. I miss it when I don't see it."

She said it quite simply and without any pose at all, and then went on to tell me about her mother, who unfortunately was not at home.

When she speaks of her mother her eyes shine with a sweet and tender light, and it is evident that mother enters into everything, and up to now at least is the centre of the girl's life.

"If you want to say something that will be of use to girls," said Miss Kennedy earnestly, "tell them that I think the best thing in the world is to have a young mother or a mother who feels young.

"Now, my mother is young; she just understands me perfectly, and we are more like sisters than mother and daughter. We share everything together, all our pleasures and all our troubles. Now that we've settled here for some time, I hope, we're enjoying every minute. When I'm not at the theatre or studying music or painting we are about together and we see everything.

A Watchful Guardian.

"I say, we're regular tourists doing the town. We've never lived here before, and we're going to make the very most of this opportunity. Mother sees that I'm busy a good part of the day, that I keep up my studies, especially music; oh, and it's she who looks after my diet. That's a very important thing, too, isn't it? I notice it always figures so much in articles on beauty.

"I'm so sorry you can't meet her, for I'm so proud of her. I want everybody to know her," little Miss Brown concluded.

I'm going back again to meet that wonderful woman who has so intelligently guided this pretty and talented daughter, and kept her healthy, girlish, simple in her ideas, full of enthusiasm and idealism. In the midst of a career which is not supposed to be conductive to any of these things, and where the best balanced heads are usually lost or completely turned after success like that which has attended little Miss Brown in her short stage life.

MISS MADGE KENNEDY IN "LITTLE MISS BROWN."

Household Hints

All mattresses should have a cover made of heavy unbleached cloth that will fit snugly. This can easily be removed and washed twice a year, at least, and protects the mattress ticking, as well as being absolutely free from dirt or germs of any kind. Mattresses should also be turned over and around once a week to keep them from having "hollow" places in the centre.

Never hang a mirror where the sun rays fall full upon it. The light and heat injure the quicksilver at the back and make the glass dull and cloudy. Whitening mixed to a soft paste with water to which a few drops of ammonia have been added is excellent for cleaning mirrors. Rub it on with a soft cloth and allow it to dry. Then rub off with a clean dry duster and polish with a newspaper.

Pack glass of china, if to travel far, in straw or hay made slightly damp. This will prevent the articles from slipping about. Allow the largest and heaviest to be placed at the bottom of the box or hamper. Let there be plenty of straw, and wrap each article separately.

When copper kettles become dull and black looking, try cleaning them in the following way: Cut a lemon in half, dip it in salt, and rub it all over the surface of the kettle. Afterward wash well in warm water to prevent the acid eating into the metal and polish with dry powdered bath brick.

After peeling onions it is often difficult to remove the unpleasant odor from the hands. This can be remedied by rubbing the hands with salt and then washing them in cold water. The odor will then quite disappear.

The Sins of the Father

LITTLE Jack was struggling through his home lessons, and there were many signs of woe and perplexity written on his impish young face.

"Ma," he began, in rather a quavering voice, "what does here-ditty mean?"

Mother wasn't quite sure herself, but was sufficiently artful not to say so outright, so she answered vaguely:

"Well, John, it's—er—it's something to do with what you get from your father or me."

Little Jack pondered deeply for a few moments. Suddenly a look of knowledge—the outcome of past unhappy experiences—appeared on his countenance.

"Then is whipping heredity, ma?" he asked.

Married Life the Third Year

No. 79—Selecting Wall Paper. Helen Has Her Choice, but Warren Thinks It's His

By MABEL HERBERT URNER

"YES, I think that's very good," Helen, with her head poised slightly on one side, was gazing critically at the wall paper the salesman held up before them. "It's so fresh and clean looking. Don't you think so, dear?"

"That's all right," agreed Warren. "It's a good bedroom paper. Want both rooms in that?"

"Oh, yes, we want the bedrooms alike."

"Now would you like to see some borders?" asked the salesman.

"No borders," said Warren briefly. "We're trying to get away from the over-decorated rooms. Now we'll look at something for the library."

The dining room and bedroom paper for the new apartment had been easy to select. But the library must harmonize with the front room into which it opened, and since that had been lately done over with most expensive cloth paper, they had decided to leave it as it was. So, armed with a sample of that paper, they were trying to get something that would "go with it."

The salesman brought out one sample book after another, but the front room paper was a grayish green, and there are no shades more difficult to combine than greens.

"Oh, no, that wouldn't do—that has a yellowish cast. You see how faded it makes this look?" Helen held up the grayish green sample.

"That's going to be a devilish hard shade to match," complained Warren. "Don't believe we can get it. Why not brown? Browns and greens always harmonize."

"But dear we want those two rooms the same tone," objected Helen.

"Well, we won't get it. Everything we've seen so far kills that shade."

A Difficult Task

When the salesman went back for still another lot of samples, Helen left her chair and walked around the room. The walls were lined with shelves filled with rolls of paper. Her glance fell on a torn sample that extended from the end of one of the rolls. She held her own sample beside it and then eagerly drew out the roll.

"Oh, Warren—look! I've found just the thing! It's exactly the shade!"

Warren held it up critically. "Yes, that's pretty good."

"Why dear," excitedly, "it's a PERFECT match!"

But when the salesman came up, he informed them that that particular paper was no longer in stock.

"Couldn't you get it?" persisted Helen eagerly. "Couldn't you order it for us?"

"No, ma'am, they're not making it this season. We tried to get that for another customer. Now I'd like to show you a paper in here," and he put the book on an easel and began throwing back the pages.

But there was nothing anywhere near the right shade. Having seen a paper that harmonized perfectly, Helen boys not be reconciled to anything else.

"What's the use to keep harping on that?" exclaimed Warren impatiently. "You can't get it. He's told you he couldn't get it. Now that's not so bad," as the salesman showed still another sample.

"Oh, no dear, that wouldn't do. Can't you see it has a bluish tinge?"

"Well, we can't find around here all day. We've got to decide on something and decide on it quick."

"But, Warren, we might find it somewhere else."

"We can't get it anywhere else. These people do all the decorating for those apartments; that's why the agent sent us here."

"But, dear, if we pay for it ourselves? I'd rather do that than spoil the room."

Warren's Selection

"Well, I wouldn't! You've got the whole stock to select from. Anybody who wasn't so darned particular could find what they wanted right here."

And in spite of Helen's protest, Warren finally selected a plain brownish green, that he declared would go "well enough."

The next morning Helen went up to the new apartment, taking a sample of the paper Warren had selected. When she was pinned it on the library wall and stood back to see how it "went" with the front room, her worst fears were realised. The two shades of green clashed loudly. Then she pinned up a sample of the paper she had wanted and which the clerk had said was not in stock. It harmonized perfectly.

The rest of the morning Helen spent in going determinedly from one wall paper store to another. At last she found the paper—exactly the same as her sample. They had only twelve rolls and could get no more—but twelve rolls were enough.

Then she went back to Gregory & Snell's, where she had been yesterday. She found the clerk who had waited on them, and made her request—that they buy the paper from the other house, allowing her to pay any difference in price.

It was such an unusual request that the clerk was puzzled.

"You'll have to see Mr. Gregory about that. I wouldn't have the authority to make such an arrangement."

He directed her to the private office. Mr. Gregory was dictating some letters to a stenographer, and Helen waited with awkward self-consciousness. She had not minded asking the clerk, but somehow she felt painfully disconcerted before this tall, gray-haired, rather distinguished looking man, who now wheeled around in his chair with a brisk, "Something I can do for you?"

Helen's color deepened, and as she nervously explained what she wanted it suddenly seemed rather foolish and unbusiness-like.

"So you feer the paper your husband selected will spoil the room? And you wish me to buy this from another firm and substitute it—preferably without his knowledge. Is that it?"

Helen, flushing crimson, rose from her chair. She had not said anything about not wishing Warren to know—yet that was what she really wanted. But she resented fiercely this man's keen intuition.

"I'm afraid I've made a very foolish request. I'm sorry I troubled you. Please let the order stand as my husband gave it."

Outside she walked blindly up the street, going over and over again the scene in the office. It was not his words she so resented, but the lurking amused note in his voice and manner as he so quickly sized up the situation. What a little fool he must think her, and how boorbeaten by her husband, that she should have so little choice in such a matter.

Looking It Over

All week the incident rankled in Helen's mind. It was Sunday afternoon that Warren suggested they go over to the apartment.

"Guess they must be about through there now—painting and all. Let's go over and see how it looks."

But Helen had little heart for the inspection. She knew that for her much joy of the new apartment would be marred by the library paper.

When they reached the apartment Warren led the way first into the bedrooms. They were charming. The selection of the bedroom paper had been excellent.

"Now let's see the library. You put up such a kick about that paper, I'll wager when you see it on the wall it'll be all right."

They went through the front room into the library. Warren threw up the shades so the light fell full upon the walls of both rooms.

"There! What'd I tell you?" he demanded triumphantly. "Could you get a better match than that?"

Helen gave an astonished gasp. IT WAS THE PAPER SHE HAD WANTED! The paper she had asked Mr. Gregory to buy of the other shop!

How had it happened? Had he merely decided that it was policy to please a customer? Helen felt it was more than that. At the time she had been subtly conscious of his interest. Was this a slight regret for the amused note in his voice that had caused her to whisk out of his office in a flash of resentment? There seemed almost a personal note in it all.

Since the paper Warren had selected had been also a plain green, and as his eye for shades was not particularly good—he did not detect the difference.

"You see now?" he went on. "Perfect match, isn't it? Couldn't be better! And you were kicking like a steer! Wanted to go somewhere else and pay for it yourself—or some such nonsense. I know what I was about. Knew that paper be all right when they got it on the wall."

Helen controlled an hysterical desire to laugh. Should she let him know? For a moment the impulse to tell him was very strong, but she wisely repressed it.

"Stand back here where you can get both rooms together. Could you beat that? See I was right now, don't you?" persisted Warren, who could never resist rubbing it in when he had proven any one wrong.

"Yes, dear," Helen answered gravely. "Now we're on the wall, I see it's really a wonderful match. I suppose one can't always judge by a sample."

"Well I judged by that sample all right. Hereafter when there's any wall paper selecting to do—you leave it to ME!"

A Case for the Dentist.

A GREAT house-warming was taking place at the Dougal McDougal place. There was game to hunt, ghosts to ditto, and good food and wine withal. There were bagpipes and bagels, dances and dingers. The crown all, Dougal-McDougal had ordered a $200 piano from London.

He went up to town, but decided not to take it down with him as it was too bulky. Instead, he had it sent on. When he finally returned he asked his trusted retainer if the piano had arrived all right.

"Weel," the former replied, "she's as richt as ye end expect. She slipped as she was gangin' tae the toone and broke a few of her front teeth, but I canna think she's really hurt."

Daysey Mayme and Her Folks

By FRANCES L. GARSIDE.

IT is hard work to get a girl started to singing, but after she begins something desperate must be done to induce her to stop.

There was company at the home of Lysander John Appleton.

The company requested Daysey Mayme to sing. She didn't know anything new, she said.

"Sing the old," said the company.

She had a cold. Then they urged her to sing anyway, assuring her they were not critical, and would never notice her slight hoarseness.

She would like to accommodate them, she said, but really she couldn't sing a note tonight. She was not in the mood.

The company knew what was expected of company in good society and persisted. And Daysey Mayme, in her shy, billboard fashion, continued to refuse.

The company, feeling at the end of an hour that even Chesterfield would urge no more, became a little less insistent.

Daysey Mayme saw the sign of waning interest and met it by going to the piano.

First she sang something in some foreign language. The company said French, Italian and colored mammy, and failed to come to a unanimous decision.

In the next song she gargled with her notes in a way that made the company look for the bottle and the spoon.

Then she sang "Home, Sweet Home," and the company wept in observance of the time-honored custom that every one should weep when hearing this song—those who haven't homes because they haven't them, and those who have homes because their homes don't suit them.

Then she sang a lullaby which wouldn't put any but a dead baby to sleep. Then the company lost count.

The company sighed, the company yawned, the company groaned. Daysey Mayme sang on.

The company began to fidget. The company got up. The company went home. Still Daysey Mayme sang on.

Her father grumbled to his wife, then he grumbled to Daysey Mayme, then he used words so big they will be sent to the State chemist to be analysed. Still Daysey Mayme sang on.

Then Lysander John, realizing that desperate ills require desperate remedies, attached a dynamite fuse to the piano and blew it out of the window. Still Daysey Mayme sang on.

Which explains why Lysander John is bound to the couch this week with strong leather straps. His family is afraid that in his wrath he will fly to pieces and spoil the wall paper.

All the Difference

Senator Ogle, a member of the Pennsylvania Assembly, had been deputed to compose an address to the newly elected President, Andrew Jackson. When the bluff old warrior submitted his document to the House a fellow member, a dapper little man from Philadelphia, observed:

"Pardon me, General—I hesitate about making any suggestion to so distinguished an individual; but I cannot refrain from saying that it is customary with cultured letter writers to write the first personal pronoun with a capital "I" instead of a small 'i.'"

General Ogle returned a look of scorn.

"Sir," said he, "when I write to so great a man as General Andrew Jackson, Democratic President of the United States, I abase myself. I abase myself, sir. I use as small an 'I' as I can put on paper. But, sir, if ever I should have to write to a little snipe like you, I would use an 'I' sir, that would fill two pages of foolscap."

Apologetic

Dr. Pillsbury—I don't like that cough of yours.

Mr. Kidder—I'm sorry, doctor; but it's the best one I've got!

BULLY! HEAD CLEAR, STOMACH SWEET, BOWELS RIGHT—"CASCARETS"

Recovered From Severe Lung Trouble

While we all know that plenty of fresh air and good food are necessary to persons suffering from lung trouble, something more is needed to bring about full health. Eckman's Alterative is a medicine for throat and lung troubles, and so many reports have been received showing that it brought about good results in a number of cases which were received together, that all sufferers who are not benefiting otherwise should at least investigate what it has done for others. It may be the means of restoring you to health. Investigate this case:—

Madison Lake, Minn.

"Gentlemen:—In December, 1908, and March, 1909, I was taken with hemorrhages of the lungs which confined me several weeks each time to my bed. These left me very weak and I coughed at nights and could not rest well. My appetite also failed me. My doctor advised me to go West. So, in September, 1909, I planned to go, but I had to have hemorrhages, which put me in bed for three weeks.

"In November, I started for Denver, Colo. After my arrival I met Michael Brody, who, upon learning of my condition, urged me to take Eckman's Alterative. In about two weeks I began to feel better. I kept on taking the medicine and improved fast. In March, 1910, I returned home. I think I am entirely well, have a good appetite and sleep well. When I left Denver my weight was 130 pounds. I now weigh 165, my usual weight. I can look for only your Alterative for my health. If I can help any other person suffering from Tuberculosis, I will gladly do so."

(Sworn Affidavit)

MRS. JUL. L. PASNACHT.

PART I.—(Continued)

BUT hark! a new sound, mingling its clatter with all the others. It is the rain. Quick, maddening, drenching. It comes; enveloping them in wet in a moment. Can they hold their faces up against it?

And the wind! Surely it must toss that aerial messenger before it and fling it back to earth, a broken and despised toy.

"Orlando!" went up in shriek, "Orlando!"

Oh, for a ray of light in those far-off heavens! For a lull in the tremendous sounds shivering the heavens and shaking the earth! But the tempest rages on, and they can only wait, five minutes, ten minutes, looking, hoping, fearing, without thought of self and almost without thought of each other, till suddenly as it had come, the rain ceases and the wind, with one final wail of rage and defeat, rushes away into the west, leaving behind it a sudden silence.

Orlando was in that shout of natural forces, but he is not in this stillness. They look aloft, but the heavens are void. Emptiness is where life was. Oswald begins to sway, and Doris, remembering him now and him only, has thrown her strong young arm about him, when—what is this sound they hear high up, high up, in the rapidly clearing vault of the heavens? A throb—a steady pant—drawing near and yet nearer—entering the circlet of great branches over their heads—descending, slowly descending—till they catch another glimpse of those hazy outlines which had so sooner taken shape than the car disappeared from their sight within the elliptical wall open to receive it.

It had survived the gale! It has reentered its haven, and that, too, without colliding with aught around or any shock to those within, just as Orlando had promised; and the world was henceforth his! Hail to Orlando Brotherson!

Oswald could hardly restrain his mad joy and enthusiasm.

"Let me in!" he cried. "You've done the trick, Orlando, you've done the trick."

"Yes, I've satisfied myself," came back in studied self-control from the other side of the door; and with a quick turning of the lock Orlando stood before him.

They never forgot him as he looked at that moment. He was drenched, battered, palpitating with excitement; but the majesty of success was in his eye and in the bearing of his incomparable figure.

As Oswald bounded toward him, he reached out his hand, but his glance was for Doris.

"Yes," he went on, in tones of suppressed elation, "there's no flaw in my triumph. I have done all that I set out to do. Now——"

Why did he stop and look hurriedly back into the hangar? He had remembered Sweetwater—Sweetwater, who at that moment was stepping carefully from his car in some remote portion of the car. The triumph was not complete. He had meant——

But there his thought stopped. Nothing of evil, nothing even of regret should mar his great hour. He was a conqueror, and it was for him now to reap the joy of conquest.

To Be Continued Tomorrow.

Remarkable

The incumbent of an old church in Wales asked a party of Americans to visit his parochial school. After a recitation he invited them to question the pupils, and one of the party accepted the invitation.

"Little boy," he said to a rosy-faced lad, "can you tell me who George Washington was?"

"Yes sir," was the smiling reply. "E was a 'Merican general."

"Quite right. And can you tell me what George Washington was remarkable for?"

"Yes, sir. 'E was remarkable 'cos 'e was a 'Merican an' told the truth."

Some Velvet and Fur-Trimmed Gowns for the Early Autumn

ON the left is an attractive velvet fur wrap. Panels of rich embroidery will be seen on many Autumn wraps. This model shows a splendid bird with outstretched wings.

The centre picture shows a stately gown carried out in tosecolored miroir velvet, fur and embroidery. The skirt is gracefully draped and a very rich effect is gained by the fur edging the embroidery that reveals the white satin of which the under robe is formed. Embroidery decorates the corsage and the sleeves are edged with fur.

Heavy fur trimming is shown in the model on the right. The Paris models are showing an increasing amount of fur trimming on gowns of all descriptions. Four fur bands surround the skirt.

Wanted a Bite.

Oh, yes; it was raining—had been all day. But they didn't mind that so much; you see, they were fishermen. All the same, they were trudging home, with weary steps and very weary looking faces.

Their baskets were empty, and, to be candid, they were in a very bad temper.

As they entered the little village a large dog ran at one of the party. The dog had a ferocious look, and was barking furiously. But the fisherman did not take much alarm at the animal. He just kicked it away carelessly.

"Aren't you afraid he'll go for you?" inquired another of the party, somewhat anxiously.

The one who had kicked at the dog looked at his companion in a sorrowful manner.

"I only wish he would!" he replied, "I'd chanced most anything to be able to go home and say I'd had a bite!"

A Warning.

Teacher—Now, Johnny, what do we learn from the parable of the prodigal son?

Johnny—Why—er—I s'pose it teaches a calf.

Before He Thought

The young undergraduate was hauled before his tutor. He had exceeded his leave by no less than two days.

"Well," said the professor, "what have you to say for yourself?"

"I'm awfully sorry," replied the undergrad. "I really couldn't get back before. I was detained by most important business."

The professor looked at him sternly. "So you wanted two more days of grace, did you?" he asked.

"No, sir," answered the young man, off his guard for the moment—"of Marjorie."

A Terrible Experience

"You must have had a terrible experience, with no food and mosquitos swarming around you," said a friend to the shipwrecked mariner who had been cast away upon a tropical island.

"You just bet I had a terrible experience," he acknowledged. "My experience was worse than that of the man who wrote, 'Water, water everywhere, but not a drop to drink,' with me it was bites, bites everywhere, but not a bite to eat."

"SYRUP OF FIGS" FOR INDIGESTION, BILIOUSNESS AND CONSTIPATION

Better than castor oil, calomel or cathartics to cleanse your stomach, liver and 30 feet of bowels. Harmless laxative for men, women and children.

Primitive folks did not need laxatives. They lived outdoors, ate plenty of fruit, and all of their food was coarse. We modern people are different. We exercise too little, eat little fruit, and our food is too fine—too rich.

We simply can't have our ten yards of bowels clogged up, liver choked with sour bile and stomach full of foul effete matter and feel well. It means that the food and waste retained in the stomach and thirty feet of bowels ferments—decays. The decay creates poisons, gases and acids, and those poisons are sucked into the blood through the very ducts intended to suck in the nutriment. Then we have sick headache, become dull, bilious, tongue coated, nervous, meals don't digest, and we feel miserable all over. So we must make our choice.

We must live like primitive folks, else we must take artificial means to move the excess bile and waste matter on and out of the system.

The safest, most harmless and effective stomach, liver and bowel cleanser and regulator for men, women and children—is delicious Syrup of Figs, which doesn't irritate, gripe or weaken. Its effect is the effect of fruits. It is composed entirely of luscious figs, senna and aromatics. Don't think you are drugging yourself. Syrup of Figs can be constantly used without harm.

Ask your druggist for "Syrup of Figs and Elixir of Senna," and see on the label that it is prepared by THE California Fig Syrup Company. This is the only genuine—the old reliable. Refuse, with contempt, the so-called Fig Syrup imitations sometimes offered to deceive you.

BELGIANS GET BIG CHINESE CONTRACT

BERLIN, Sept. 30.—Valuable railroad concessions have been granted a Belgian financial syndicate by the Chinese government in consideration for a $50,000,000 loan, according to a report current in financial circles here today. The money is to be devoted to railroad building, and Belgian contractors will get the work.

NEW YORK FACES BIG TEXTILE STRIKE

NEW YORK, Sept. 30.—The textile manufacturers of New York State have as yet made no formal announcement to their employes as to wages under the new fifty-four hour schedule, which is made effective by law October 1. Notices may be posted today. Reductions of wages may cause a strike.

CANADIAN PACIFIC EARNINGS INCREASE

Canadian Pacific Railway's August earnings were as follows: Gross earnings $12,251,715, increase $1,529,811; working expenses $7,583,790, increase $1,187,456; net earnings $4,717,925, increase $342,355.

LONDON COPPER MARKET.

LONDON, Sept. 30.—The copper market opened firm. Spot, £79 3s 9d, up 3s 9d; futures, £80 3s 9d, up 5s.

TO-DAY'S STOCK MARKETS; FINANCIAL NEWS

STATE STREET, Sept. 30.—The last day of the month showed a general spirit of optimism among the traders on the Boston exchange, and the general trend of prices was upward, in marked contrast to Wall Street, which was decidedly off at the start, though New York prices came back after a few minutes of trading.

The copper situation had a very buoyant tendency in the local market, for there were reports from many of the copper companies of increased earnings and of higher wages to come.

The Nevada Consolidated at Ely has issued an official announcement of a general raise in wages October 1. Employes receiving $3 a day or more will be advanced 25 cents and those under that will be advanced 20 cents.

The mill men and smelter men at McGill, Nevada, have voted to stand by the Bingham strikers. No intimation has been given as to what they will do—whether they will accept the increase or be considered to stand by their vote by the union officials.

General Manager D. C. Jackling says that the Chino output for September will be about the same as August, which approximated 5,000,000 pounds.

A gentleman close to the controlling interests in Greene-Cananea states the company directors to declare a quarterly dividend of 25 cents in October, thereby placing the stock on a $1 per annum dividend basis. He says also that something better than $1 will be declared in 1913 if the price of copper holds where it is now.

Railroads Are Strong.

Following the big general advance in prices for railroads and industrials to almost record figures the past two weeks, stock quotations, especially for the railroad issues cannot help to continue strong, for the great Fall crop movements will keep earnings at a high figure, and traffic is already at an enormous volume.

The extent to which Americans are invading the European exchanges is shown by the announcement today that Swift & Company is to be listed on London 'Change at about 112.

So far as cash is concerned, despite the demand for money in Wall Street and from the interior to move crops, the rate is expected to stay at 6 per cent. The New York sub-treasury since Saturday gained $1,294,000 from the banks. The National Treasury has a great reserve on hand which it can throw into the depositaries throughout the nation, and this may not even be needed.

Of the £1,250,000 of South African gold available in the open market in London today £1,000,000 was obtained for New York. The remainder was secured for India.

With the market unruffled and with coppers firm at the end of the first hour, United Fruit was up 1 point; United States Smelting ⅝, Butte & Superior ¼ and Franklin ¼.

North Butte showed a falling off of ⅝, North Lake ⅛, Butte ⅛ and American Zinc 1 (ex-dividend).

New York Is Irregular.

North Lake is one of the companies promoted by Stephen R. Dow, who recently failed. So far the assignment has not seriously affected the prices for the Dow stocks.

An irregular tone prevailed at the New York opening and many important issues sustained material loss. Reading was one of the most vigorous sold, opening at 172⅜, or ⅝ under Saturday's closing then losing ⅛ additional. U. S. Steel continued to be the heaviest issue, followed by Consolidated Copper, Erie common, Union Pacific, Indian Pacific, Southern Railway.

Missouri Pacific was up at the offset, but later receded. Southern Pacific gained ⅛. Lehigh Valley was one of the best held issues of the list, opening ¼ higher, Pennsylvania rose ⅜, and a fractional gain was made in American Smelting.

The New York curb was irregular.

In London, as was anticipated, the securities market was influenced by the Balkan situation and consols showed a tendency incidental to the monthly carryover. American Illway shares and Canadian Pacific sliced down on profit-taking.

Grand Trunk is strong on the increase of $37,000 in 1e August earnings.

Good Money Outlook.

It has been alleged ever since money became more active and the higher rate for call loans has prevailed that preparations for the October 1 disbursements were underway, a potent factor, however, at was assumed before the opening the morning that inasmuch as today is the last day before those disbursements will be made, the money market may show somewhat erratic. On the other hand, thoughtful observers know that the preparations were largely made some days since. With this factor out of the way the money market, and with the money returning to accustomed channels, that will be contributed toerwrew for interest and dividends. Those who are watching the money market closely will be called upon to consider only the demands for moving the crops from commercial and manufacturing interests and from Wall Street. It is believed the rate will ickx at 6 per cent.

They will therefore be in a better position than they have been within the last ten days or two weeks to get an accurate idea as to the extent that money is to be made tight by the demands from interior points in connection with the season's large crop.

If it develops within a few days that a reasonable amount of money can be obtained at about 6 per cent. for Wall Street purposes, interests who have been active in the market within the last ten days say that they believe the trading will continue active and that prices will gradually advance.

GREAT GAIN IN COPPER OUTPUT

The copper output of the Bingham camp for month of September was [illegible] than one million pounds greater than during August.

It is understood that the out of Anaconda is to be increased gradually until the 35,000,000 pound point is reached.

The mining of a slightly [illegible] ore in many of the mines, especially the North Butte and coalition properties, contributed to the increase. The Tuolumne Company has also opened some new ore bodies.

The output of the month of September amounted to 29,054,040 lbs., compared with 28,009,980 pounds in August and 21,462,080 pounds in September a year ago.

WHITMAN AGAIN MEETS SCHEPPS

NEW YORK, Sept. 30.—Active preparations were begun today by District Attorney Whitman for the fall next Monday of Lieutenant Charles A. Becker for the murder of Herman Rosenthal, the gambler who screened him of graft, and immediately on reaching his office, the District Attorney held a long conference with Sam Schepps, the nature of which he refused to divulge other than to say that it was in reference to the testimony Schepps will give before the jury. No further delay is expected by the District Attorney when the case is called and he expects it to progress with a reasonable degree of rapidity.

Over fifty witnesses will be called by the state, several of whom were eye-witnesses of the tragedy. Two of those were personally observed by Whitman's aides and are expected to add much strength to the state's case.

The names of the two witnesses were not given out, but it is known that one is a close friend of "Dago Frank" Cirofici, one of the gunmen indicted for the actual murder and the other is a young naval officer, who was on his way to the Army and Navy club, located in the block a scant end of the block in which the Metropole stands, on the morning when Rosenthal was killed.

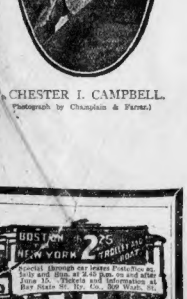
"The Electric Show a Dazzling Spectacle"

Personal Statement of CHESTER I. CAMPBELL, The Great Exhibition Builder



CHESTER I. CAMPBELL.
Photograph by Chanplain & Farnar.

FOR ten years I have been actively identified with Exhibitions and Expositions throughout the United States. And I have seen every one worth seeing in Europe.

In all that time there has been nothing in this or any foreign country which can be compared to the 1912 Electric Show in Boston.

Not in magnitude, nor in grandeur, nor in beauty, nor in vital, throbbing human interest.

It is a Great Musical Festival-Feast for the ear.

A Kaleidoscopic Panorama of Dazzling Light, of Beautiful Decorations and Color Spectacles for the eye.

While the brain gropes bewildered thro' a marvelous array of over a Thousand Educational Features.

All the Master Minds of Electrical Science are represented.

All—completely all—of the World's Electrical Inventions that have improved the Habits and Customs of Civilized Mankind—they, too, are there.

Thomas A. Edison's Rarest Dreams-that-have-come-true are there. The Wizard himself says this is the zenith of his life's efforts.

Not a man, woman or child in all this country who passes thro' the three huge floors and the myriad aisles of this great Dream World, but will come again and again, to store away for gripping reflection what Modern Electrical Science has done to improve Commercial, Hygienic and Intellectual Conditions for the Human Race.

Come to Mechanics' Building from 10 in the morning to 10 o'clock P. M., Monday morning to Saturday evening. Night and Day are the same—both have been transformed by this New Magic wrought by Electricity.

See the Impossible of Yesterday a Vivid Truth Today for All Men and for All Nations.

Yes, it is a Remarkable Story painted in Light and Motion and Moving Mechanisms to astonish you and hold you in the Greatest Wonder Moment of your Life.

And note this final fact.

The admission is but 25 cents to everything. No extras—the 3 great floors wide open for just this one admission price.

Here every cent buys an Unbelievable Dollar's Worth of Entertainment, Delight, Astonishment and Instruction to treasure up all the Days of your Life and tell your Children's Children thro' the Years to Come.

After a Century of Struggle, Ireland Is at Last in Sight of Home Rule

For more than a hundred years the Irish people have been struggling for the recovery of their national parliament. A bill is now pending in the British Parliament which should within two years restore to Erin the old Parliament House on College Green in Dublin.

The Commons will undoubtedly pass the Home Rule bill. The Lords will do their worst to defeat it. They can and probably will delay it through two sessions of Parliament. It will then become law in spite of the Lords, and King George will sign the bill.

Thus the cause of Home Rule is in sight of its goal. But the tension of those who strive for Ireland must not be relaxed until the race is won.

At Carnegie Hall, New York, last evening, William H. K. Redmond, one of the ablest and most devoted of the Irish party in the British Parliament, joined with a great company of distinguished citizens to rally the friends of Ireland to a last and winning stand for Irish legislative independence.

The story those men told last night to that immense audience in New York city is the story of Henry Grattan and Daniel O'Connell, of Isaac Butt, of Charles Stewart Parnell and the Land League, of the fidelity and devotion of the Irish race to its cradleland in our own day.

The meeting of a like nature to be held tomorrow night in Tremont Temple promises to be one of the most important and most memorable in the support of Ireland's passionate struggle for justice held here since that memorable night, thirty years ago, when Wendell Phillips, on the stage of the Boston Theatre, presented Charles Stewart Parnell to a Boston audience.

How to Go to Sleep

Here Is a Suggestion Offered Most Humbly

Copyright, 1912, by American-Journal-Examiner.

Fortunately for the world, many millions of men never worry about going to sleep. All they need is to find time and a bed for sleeping, and the sleep comes to them.

But to many the sleep problem is as important and as terrifying as that other problem, "how to digest."

It is worth while to help solve these problems. For the most useful work that is done in the world is the work that uses up the nerves and fatigues the brain, causing sleeplessness and the suffering that accompanies it.

Much advice has been given to the man who cannot sleep.

One man will tell you to lie with your eyes shut, imagine sheep jumping over a hedge, and count them.

Another will tell you to count from one up toward a million—until you go to sleep.

Many men become more wide awake than ever when they try to invent imaginary sheep or to keep track of their counting.

At various times in this column we have given advice on this subject, some of it, perhaps, not utterly worthless.

For instance, if you wake up and cannot go to sleep again, you may, by drinking a little milk or eating a cracker, overcome your wakefulness.

Sleeplessness is caused usually by pressure of blood on the brain. By putting the stomach to work you draw the blood from the brain to the stomach, and sleep follows.

This idea you will see illustrated in the cases of babies and of puppies, which go to sleep as soon as their small stomachs are filled.

Another important thing is to study the art of lying in bed comfortably. Many sleep in strained positions, with knees drawn up to their chins, or with legs crossed, so that one set of muscles is necessarily fatigued, or with fingers clasped, and so on.

Try to find a position absolutely restful, in which the mattress supports every ounce of your weight, and your muscles support none of it.

The advice which we want to give you today, and which we should like to have you try, is theoretical, but in one or two cases it has worked very well.

You know that the blood in the brain causes sleeplessness. You know it is the heart that sends the blood there.

Sleeping on the left side all night is harmful, and for this reason: In lying on the left side the weight of your body presses on your heart and interferes with its action. The heart is subjected throughout the night to unusual pressure, which is harmful.

But if you can adopt the following plan, we believe it may do good. Try it and watch the results anyhow:

When you first go to bed, lie on your left side. The unusual weight on the heart will quiet its action and tend to decrease its activity and that of the brain. Retain this position until you find that the world is getting hazy, and strange, foolish, incoherent ideas creep into your mind—in other words, until you begin to go to sleep.

If you can catch yourself just as a sleepy moment comes on, and then [illegible] on your right side, we think you will have no difficulty in [illegible] through the night.

[illegible] way of inducing sleep will soon become a habit. In some [illegible] been known to dispose of sleeplessness altogether.

[illegible] suggestion, in addition to the others offered.

How Grafters Are Made—Early Training of Boys Responsible for Their Acts in Later Life

By Ella Wheeler Wilcox

Copyright, 1912, by American-Journal-Examiner

If you do not want men to be grafters, begin with the little boys in their kindergarten age; and train their minds to think of something besides personal gain.

Do not buy their good behavior, or their polite attentions, or their small duties with pennies, sweetmeats, or promises of picnics. Instil into their young minds a personal pride and self-respect which will cause them to be ashamed of receiving presents for every good act.

This can be done by making the child a confidant and by talking in a friendly way which will interest and entertain, about the value of good manners, and the pleasure and happiness which older people feel in children who show good breeding; and making it plain that any lack of politeness and willingness to oblige others, or any display of greediness for pay, or acceptance of money for little acts of courtesy, reflects upon the family pride and gives strangers an opportunity to look down upon such children.

All Children Should Have Individual Pocketbooks

A frequent and pleasant reiteration of similar ideas will invariably guide a child away from thoughts of looking for or accepting money for every courteous act.

Then when the child has formed dignified ideals in this matter, an arrangement should be made so that the boy or girl has an individual purse, if only a few pennies each week can be afforded to supply it. If a child desires to become a wage earner, have it understood that it is a matter of straight business.

He does an errand for a nickel or for a penny, as the case may be, but the courtesies which every well-bred child is taught, or the thoughtful acts which should be a part of his education, are not to be sold or bought.

Meantime parents and relatives should make a point of not imposing upon the good nature, time or strength of children, by making them continually run errands and fetch and carry when a little thoughtfulness would prevent the necessity.

Children have certain rights which are sometimes, if not frequently, overlooked by their elders.

It seems a small thing for Jack to be asked to run up two flights of stairs, or over to a neighbor's, or to the post box on the corner; but if there are four older people who ask the favors a dozen times a day it becomes a little tedious for Jack.

And when the elders forget to say thank you, and are quick to complain if Jack is slow, then the injustice becomes more and more apparent to the childish mind.

Perfect courtesy, absolute politeness, and unvarying appreciation should mark a parent's attitude toward a child.

The Fault Always Lies with His Older Associates

Then it is an easy matter to make that child feel a keen delight in doing little acts of kindness and performing little duties for the parent. And with no thought of graft; for that is precisely what it is, when a child is always on the alert to receive some money return for every act.

Whatever is wrong in a child, the fault lies with his older associates.

Every man who is in prison for deceiving the people in his misuse of power and his misapplication of influence, could have been made impervious to temptation if he had been rightly reared the first fourteen years of his life.

A fashionable boarding or military school does not supply the kind of education referred to.

That must come from personal association with an older person, whose mind is wholesome, and whose principles are high, and who makes it a solemn and beautiful duty to awaken the young being to an understanding of life in its very truest and best sense.

Not by talking religion or philosophy; but by making clear the small personal responsibility which rests on each human to become the very finest and best type of his race, and to begin being this type, by scorning whatever is petty, small, ignoble and mercenary, and by cultivating whatever is big and broad and altruistic and helpful, while developing the qualities which will lead to independence and success.

Teach Boy to Take Necessary Pride in Himself

Any boy who has been given this association with an older individual will never stand before the world in the shameful limelight of a criminal.

Do you have to pay your boy for every little act of kindness or every courtesy he shows?

Then why have you not taught him to so love and respect you, and to take such pride in himself that he could not be a small grafter?

Editor Boston AMERICAN:

You did splendid work for us during the campaign, and the Vermont democracy will ever be indebted to the AMERICAN for its efforts in our behalf.

Not only for myself, but for my associates on the ticket and in behalf of the party, I sincerely thank you and hope that sometime we may be able to fully reciprocate the favors which you so generously bestowed upon us during the campaign.

Yours sincerely,

HARLAND B. HOWE.

St. Johnsbury, Vt., September 26, 1912.
